MARRIES SAVE COLLEGE GIRLS IN NICARAGUA
Three Americans Wounded in Clash with the Rebel Troops.
U. S. FORCE FIRED UPON Washington Relieved to Learn Men from Warships Are Safe.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, NICARAGUA.
Sept. 21.—The fifty American college girls who were cut off by rebel forces at Granada have been saved, according to information that reached here today. Three Americans were wounded by rebel bullets in a clash between marines and blue jackets, but the rebels mistook them for men and fired at them in mistake.

The sailors from Uncle Sam's ships who left Managua on Sunday, and for whose safety there was some fear, reached Granada with no other mishap than the wounding of the three men. The men were carried along with the force, and it is not believed that their injuries are very serious.

The trouble with the rebels took place at Managua. The rebels, entrenched on Barranca Hills there, fired on the forces of Major Hendry D. Butler as their train approached. The train was returned by the marines, but Major Butler quickly turned it. After unloading the relief forces the Americans were allowed to proceed. They found Granada on the verge of starvation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The State and Navy departments credit the welcome news today that the girls of Granada have been rescued by a body of about 400 marines under Major Hendry D. Butler, who was sent by the train this time a strong company and captured the city of Granada from the rebels who had been occupying it.

Go to Rescue of Girls.
On Sunday a company of marines under Major Hendry D. Butler, started out by train to relieve the city of Granada on the request of the mothers of about fifty college girls who reported to the American minister at Managua that they were being starved and persecuted, and that they were being held in the city of Granada.

Major Butler's command was stopped at Managua, where it was met by the marines and sent back to the city. The Admiral's command, which carried three companies of marines and a company of engineers, started on Sunday for Managua. The combined forces of Southern and Butler arrived about 230 men. They were met by the forces of the rebels, who were informed that the girls were being held in the city of Granada.

Gov. Foss Has Last Big Rally A Great Victory Predicted Pelletier Campaign Active

GOVERNOR FOSS IN ACTION

CHAIRMAN RICHMOND SAYS FOSS WILL GET SUPER CENT OF VOTES WEDNESDAY

Pelletier Makes Claims of Victory But Democratic Leaders Laugh Governor at Tremont Temple. While District Attorney Talks in Open Air

A GREAT Tremont Temple demonstration last night for Eugene H. Foss and David L. Walsh indicated that the Massachusetts leaders of the Democracy have lost none of their great popularity with the people.

Governor Foss was given an ovation by the largest gathering of the primaries campaign. He was cheered and cheered to the echo. The demonstration in favor of his young running mate on the ticket was not less enthusiastic.

"By George!" the Governor said, "this would be victory enough if I were not so certain to come, but the others are coming!"

The Temple was packed to its capacity even before the meeting was called to order by Sherman L. Whipple, Mr. Whipple, who is Foss's candidate for United States Senator two years ago against Senator Lodge, made a characteristic speech.

With all that was going on politically in Boston last night it was hard to believe that the talking and the working and the shouting were really going on. The demonstration was rather than an election day. The demonstration was rather than an election day.

Particular Pelletier rally was only a few steps up the hill from Tremont square, the brightest and loudest spot on Saturday night in all New England. The demonstration was rather than an election day.

Attorney General Joseph C. Pelletier, whose enthusiastic young friends declare that he is on the eve of the most successful victory in his history of politics, had forth on the steps of the Tremont House in Tremont square.

This particular Pelletier rally was only a few steps up the hill from Tremont square, the brightest and loudest spot on Saturday night in all New England. The demonstration was rather than an election day.

From 1,500 to 2,000 people—according to the best estimates of the evening—were gathered on the hill to see the speaker. It was all about the hill to see the speaker. It was all about the hill to see the speaker.

Many of the speakers of the evening were John W. Cummings, the noted Fall River attorney, who took up the subject of Governor Foss's campaign for the presidency, and Representative William Pittenger, George W. Anderson, the party candidate last year for Attorney General, and David L. Walsh, the candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Mr. Walsh admitted the full responsibility for the third candidacy of Governor Foss, and in his speech he said that he was doing it for the sake of the state, and in his speech he said that he was doing it for the sake of the state.

HARVARD AWAITS ASTOR, ON WAY HOME

He Says He Won't Return to College, but Room Is Ready.

Vincet Astor sailed for America yesterday from London, declaring he would enter business in New York. Preparations are being made at Randolph Hall, Cambridge, to receive Astor's father, a young man as a student at Harvard. He has taken an apartment in the hall, the share of the rental being $10 a month. Notwithstanding this, young Astor told the London reporters he had decided not to return to college. Whether his mother, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, had any part in this apparent change of plan, is not known. Astor said on sailing for America to the Marescaux.

"I am returning to consult with my representatives on business matters, and probably may take a house and enter business in New York. I have determined not to return to college, but will not say where I shall live, whether I shall return to England or whether my mother will arrange to live in America."

Concerning the new Astor job, he was silent. His mother saw him off at the boat train and would not be interviewed.

Astor will be the richest young man in Harvard society, if he returns. He will probably be the richest student ever in Harvard's history. After the death of his father, Colonel John Jacob Astor, in the Titanic disaster, Vincent Astor inherited most of the Astor fortune. His fortune is estimated at over $100,000,000.

Young Astor planned to be in the most extensive dormitory on the "old" campus. He has leased suite 31 in Randolph Hall. Last year he lived in the same.

Young Astor's decision to come back to Harvard was something of a surprise to people who had read that he planned to take up a business career in New York, at leasting to his real business career. Last March, fully a month before his father died, Astor had declared his intention of finishing out his career at college and winning his degree. His father was slight. He engaged the Randolph Hall suite last spring, and never gave it up. He was reported, on his last day at Harvard, with possibly a course at his father.

Miss Nesbitt, Brookline Girl, Is Bride of Scot Church Blooms With Heather at Wedding

Wedding of Brookline Belle Crown of Over-Sea Romance.

MRS. JAMES GRIEVE THORBURN

An international romance led to a charming bride in the Church of Our Saviour, in Longwood, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Dorothy Nesbitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nesbitt, of Brookline, was married to James Grieve Thorburn, of Peebles, Scotland. The church was blooming with heather, imported from Scotland in honor of the bridegroom's native land. The heather made a particularly effective as well as appropriate decoration.

On the day before the wedding the bride-elect gave a luncheon at the Copple-Town in honor of her wedding attendants. She presented her maid of honor and two bridesmaids with her pins of pearl and sapphires.

The wedding at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was performed by the Rev. Reginald Hodge, rector of the Church of Our Saviour. Miss Nesbitt had for her maid of honor, Miss Alice O'Meara of the Rock Bar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen O'Meara. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Brock of Waban and Miss Florence Wynn of Brookline. The best man was Frank E. Sautter of Halifax, England, and the ushers were Harold Everett Nesbitt of Brookline, Alexander W. Hadden of Halifax, Reginald Charles Chapman and Frederick O. Birch of Brookline, and Donald H. Phipps of Seattle. The ring bearer was the little nephew of the bridegroom, "Jack" Murray of Seattle.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white tulle with a train of white tulle, a duchesse lace, a duster of the valley and white roses. The attendants wore white tulle in blue champagne with a duster of gold. They wore gold pins and carried baskets of pink Killarney roses.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, No. 53 Summit avenue, Brookline. Mr. and Mrs. Thorburn will live in Peebles.

HOME RULE BILL IS SAFE, SAYS REDMOND

Commons Will Surely Pass It, He Declares; Lords Will Be Contented Scene.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—W. H. K. Redmond, brother of the Irish statesman, John Redmond, arrived here today for a stay of two weeks in this country. The principal object of his visit is to address a meeting of the United Irish League in Philadelphia, September 28, on the Home rule bill and a similar meeting in New York, September 29.

"Will the Home Rule bill be defeated?" said Mr. Redmond.

"No, I am at a loss to know how this question renders its momentary. It is certain that the bill will pass the House of Commons, but whether it will pass the House of Lords is doubtful. It is the duty of the Irish people to see that the Home Rule bill goes through Parliament, a duty that will meet the requirements of the Parliament act, and in this way it will become a law in two years."

The passage of the Parliament act last year, which shows the House of Lords of its power to thwart the will of the House of Commons, has cleared the track for the Home Rule bill. By this act, the bill will pass the lower house. The chances are that the government will keep its majority of 300 in the House of Commons.

Then the bill will go to the upper house. It is probable that the Lords will refuse to adopt the measure. But, mark you, they cannot now defeat it as they could prior to the Parliament act. They will have to pass the bill in the House of Commons, and in this way it will become a law in two years."

Redmond said that the bill will return to the House of Commons. The House will again pass the measure. The bill will again fall of adoption by the Lords. Then the House will come more power the bill, and at last Home Rule will be a fact.

The Parliament act makes this result possible by declaring that a bill shall become law which is passed three times by the House of Commons at three sessions within two years.

All indications are that the government will retain power for at least another 18 months. By that time the bill will have been passed the necessary three times, despite the hostility of the House of Lords.

Two Blazes Strip John K. Ryan

The first cold day of the Fall, yesterday, with its consequent lighting of new fires, cost John K. Ryan and his family their home in the rear of No. 241 Washington street, Dorchester. Their flat and furniture were practically ruined by two fires, at a cost of $1,100.

The first fire was due to a faulty chimney. It did $100 damage. Two hours later a second blaze took hold and the damage was driven out and $1,000 damage was done.

The 12 children, Katherine, eleven years; Eleanor, eleven; William, ten; Anthony, nine; Patrick, eight; James, five; Margaret, four; Thomas, three; Thomas, two; and Mary, one, were taken to the home of their grandparents, Mrs. William Moore, No. 212 Washington street, nearby.

John left the children's father sitting except a sum of money he had saved. "But I hope it's enough to get us another start," was Ryan's comment last night.

Neighbors criticized the flames, claiming that they saw shadows on the roof burning after the first fire had been extinguished. The charges is denied by the firemen.

Size.

ROCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 21.—Every body who runs for the Legislature from Rochester this Fall will have to state squarely and in writing just how he stands on the proposition of selling eggs by weight instead of by the dozen.

The Rochester egg-weight movement is being pushed by Palmer Conner, who owns the most wonderful Wyandotte hen in New England.

"Baldhead," the hen—cause though one day this week with an egg weighing three ounces.

The neighbors were hardly done checking about this phenomenon when Mrs. Conner delivered an egg measuring eight inches around, in one way, and seven and one-half inches the other way. This egg weighed a quarter of a pound.

The legislative committee of the "Anti-Progressives" has already declared for eggs by weight.

TWO CUPIDS MOCK AT FRITZI SCHEFF

She Talks of a Separation from John Fox, Jr., Her Husband,
Yet She Loves Him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—New comes the real reason for the report that Fritz Scheff is to separate from his novelist husband, John Fox, Jr.

It is another case of failure to reconcile nature as she is with nature as portrayed on the stage.

Though Mr. Fox is several years younger than the bright prima donna admits she will leave him but she has been unhappy because he loved the quiet and peace of the Virginia hills, and objected to the constant travelling that is part of the life of the stage.

Mr. Fox visited his publisher's work, and returned to Virginia. Miss Scheff is brilliant over the fact that the difference between her and her husband has been happily and in the atmosphere of the woods and hills. He is essentially a staid and food of his home.

Miss Scheff's next work "The Theatre" is her inspiration.

ARREST W. H. RICE IN DYNAMITE PLOT

Milton Quarryman Indicted in Connection With the Lawrence "Plant."

Following the report of the special grand jury yesterday, William H. Rice, a quarryman of East Milton, was arrested on the charge that he violated the law by helping to carry illegally through the streets the dynamite that was planted in Lawrence at the time of the late strike last winter.

The District Attorney's office asked that he be held in $2,000 bail. A bond in this amount was furnished, and Rice was released. He is the fourth man indicted in connection with the Lawrence dynamite case.

Rice is the man who admitted that he furnished dynamite to Ernest W. Pittman, who committed suicide rather than testify before the grand jury about the planting of dynamite.

Rice declared when he made his statement about furnishing Pittman with the dynamite that he had been informed that Pittman wanted to use the explosive illegally. It was understood that Rice claimed that he had nothing to do with transmitting the dynamite through the streets.

Rice was arrested at his home. The arrest was made by Inspector Thomas Lee of Boston and Chief North of the Milton force. He was brought to police headquarters. He gave his age as forty-four. When hearing the report of the grand jury Judge Hardy excused the jurors until September 26. This is taken to indicate that the dynamite case is not yet ended. Under ordinary circumstances the grand jury would be excused until the regular October session.

The three already indicted in this case are William M. Wood, president of the American Woollen Company; Frederick R. Atkins, a wealthy oil manufacturer and country trustee of Boston; and Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge grocer. Atkins, Atkins and Collins are held for $5,000 for conspiracy, and Collins is also bonded for another $1,000 for transmitting dynamite, according to the indictment.

The planting of the dynamite took place early in the Lawrence strike last spring. John J. Brown, the Lawrence undertaker, has already been fined $500 by a Middlesex County Court for his part in the conspiracy and Ernest W. Pittman of Andover admitted suicide upon the day he was arrested before the grand jury to tell what he knew about the case.

The station is watching the progress of the case.

Throng Temples on Yom Kippur Two Centenarians Keep Day

MORRIS COHEN, AGED 112 AND MRS. ALTE BERGER, 108

Among the many Yom Kippur services held yesterday by the children of Israel in Greater Boston, none was more notable than the special one held in the room of Morris Cohen, aged 112 years, and of Mrs. Alte Berger, aged 108, at the home of Agnes Helman. The home is at No. 24 Queen street, Dorchester.

On account of their feeble condition it was necessary to arrange special Yom Kippur services in their home. Mr. Cohen is particularly weak from his heavy burden of years, but when the day of Atonement the prayers the aged Israelite joined in with his own voice.

Similarly, the ruler went to Mrs. Berger's room and held Yom Kippur prayers for her herself. Mrs. Cohen lives in the home for aged Hebrew women instead of in her own home adjoining Mr. and Mrs. Cohen. She was tried in every manner to get away from the institution when she was seven years ago. She was permitted to stay with her wife. When Mrs. Cohen died a year later, Mrs. Berger remained in the same room when they occupied together. There are over 100 women in the home. Some are very elderly and special services were held yesterday for such as are bedridden. But Mrs. Berger is the oldest of the women and Mrs. Cohen is the oldest of all them.

Arrangements for the services at the home were made by St. North's synagogue. At the Temple Beth-El in Dorchester, which was dedicated last week, a Yom Kippur collection of $6,000 was taken for temple expenses. There was a christening at Temple Beth-El yesterday, in addition to the Yom Kippur services. Coming on the Day of Atonement and marking the first christening in the new synagogue, the ceremony was held in the presence of the Rev. J. H. Baklanoff of Roxbury. A Yom Kippur, which began at sunset Friday night, closed with the blowing of the shofar, or sacred horn, at sunset last night.

"5,000 YEAR" WIFE WANTS HER BABIES

Mrs. Ott Tells How Husband Whom She Seeks to Divorce Took Them to His Home.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Ralph Chester Ott, who recently filed suit for divorce against the 51,000-year artist, was asked her as the persecuted Princess Annette who had lived for 5,000 years, had been with letters from all over the country.

The letters were to know her exact feelings, the intricacies of her dream, the psychological development of her mind and a short history of "how things looked in those bygone days of Chicago."

Mrs. Ott said she has been bothered almost to death, and declares she is tired of the "nihilistic" "flood" dream, ever was sent through the country. She also declares that the dream of "her dream" was love and "Egyptian love" was that of her "dreamy husband."

"I never was so far gone that I could see myself a Princess Annette, as they call me," she said, "but I would not be surprised if my husband could see me sometimes. I think those were his conditions that bothered me in my dream."

Mrs. Ott Will Fight.

Mrs. Ott is preparing to make a fight for the custody of her two children, Mary Jane and Arce, eleven and twenty-months old, respectively. The children now are with Ott, at the home of his mother in Springfield, Mo. How he got them is a strange story, according to Mrs. Ott.

"It is not true that I let my husband take the children to his home," she said, "as the trial at Springfield, Mo., and I had agreed to take a trip with him, and we passed through on our way west. I never have been able to get along with my people, and I thought it best for me to leave them. After we left Springfield I will let him take them to his home, but I will not let him take them to his home. I have not seen them since. I have not seen them since. I have not seen them since."

Extravagant in Dress.

A dispatch from Springfield says that Ott is preparing to fight the suit and will allege that she was extravagant in dress. Mrs. Ott says she could not have dressed extravagantly if she had desired for the last two years.

"If you can figure out how a woman can dress on nothing a month and be extravagant, I will admit it," she said.

"As to my attracting other men's attention, I could do it if I had a man to hang around me—necessarily when he had money—and if I want to be liked, I am one whole year I made memoranda and found that I had been down town nine times. A person could have a whole time and find that, wouldn't she? I have tried in every manner to get along with Ralph and make a man of him, but my friends know who he is to leave. I have no fears of his cowardly. I believe my attorneys will attend to that."

Mrs. Ott is living with her mother.

FOXES ARE PLENTIFUL.

HOTBROOK, Sept. 21.—Foxes are plentiful in this section in fact, they have been too plentiful to suit one Charles Parnell of Plymouth street, who has been losing a number of valuable fowls. Parnell has shot two foxes and will keep the skins as souvenirs.

PREACHER'S WIDOW SET FREE BY COURT

Plight of Aged Woman Arouses Pity of Judge and Detectives.

Meaning with apparent physical and mental anguish, a woman of fifty years, easily attracted and with other evidence of her age, who admitted that she was the widow of a clergyman, stood in the Boston Municipal Court yesterday, charged with shoplifting.

It was one of those striking cases that suddenly cause a deep silence in a courtroom—a situation that recalled the tragedy of everyday life in a big city such as is incident to a popular play at a Boston theatre.

A court officer helped her to the railing. A young woman—the store detective—with a pained look on her face, stood near by.

"She took pins and baby's clothing" it was explained to Judge Duff. "The article was valued at $1.00."

The prisoner said she was from Wellfleet. The court gave her a long of detention. "Did you take the things?" asked the Judge in a kindly tone.

"I don't know—I can't remember," she faltered. The judge looked toward the store detective.

"She told me she became addicted to morphine when ill," stated the detective. "I let her go for her. I do not care to press the charge."

Judge Duff asked the case on file. The woman's eyes filled with tears. She murmured her thanks and left the court room with bowed head.

YANKEE GIRL SINGS AS GADSKI PROTEGE

Miss Clara Huntington to Make Debut at Trer, Alasco.

Under the auspices of Miss. Gadski, Clara Huntington, a young and beautiful Chicago girl who has been studying abroad for several years, will make her debut on September 22 at the Opera in Trer, Alasco. According to a letter received by a Boston friend, Miss Huntington's debut is literally under Gadski's auspices, for she will wear Gadski's costumes when she appears as Queen of Night in Mozart's "Magic Flute."

"Then if you are to sing Queen of Night," declared Gadski, "you must wear my costumes. I have the most gorgeous costumes for that part, which, alas, is never seen nowadays at the Metropolitan."

That is how the debutante happens to be debuting in Gadski's clothes.

At the debut of the young singer will be the European agent of A. H. Woods, the American light opera manager. Mr. Woods has heard glowing reports of the voice of Miss Huntington and he hopes to persuade her to return to America for a season or two of light opera.

WILSON GETS HOME; HURRIES TO RALLIES

Democratic Candidate in Good Shape After 3,000-Mile Trip.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Sept. 21.—Patented by railway track, but otherwise in excellent condition. Governor Wilson remained in the car until the train started. It was a grueling work for him and as he stepped off the train he appeared remarkably from considering that he had uttered 1000 words in a matter of twenty speeches.

The Governor was not permitted to visit the school. He was, however, in the car when he was informed he had been invited to give a speech at the college in opposition to the candidacy of John H. Johnson, for United States Senator from New Jersey. Consequently Mr. Wilson arrived at Jersey City at 8 o'clock and was on the train for the school at 9 o'clock. The school facing an audience of 1000 or a few hundred persons. The Governor was welcomed to Jersey where he addressed an equally large audience. He was warmly received by the audience. He said:

"I am not here to not choosing was now by their private characters, for their private characters are not the basis of public opinion. I am not here to choose men because they understand the interests of America at this present moment. I am not here to choose men whose politics is being rejected now, not because he does not understand the people, but because he holds convictions from which he will not waver. I am here to choose men who are critical juncture in the history of America. I am here to choose men who are critical juncture in the history of the Democratic party."

There is only one condition upon which the Governor will accept the nomination of the people of the nation; that is that it be a nomination of a man who is absolutely committed to progressive politics. He said that he would not vote for so certainly as it makes any other choice, it will be rejected now and used for the purpose of holding these things again for our generation."

MAYOR TELLS HOW L STRIKE WAS SETTLED

Outside of Boston, where they count upon the support of the "nests" as against that of the "nest" case supporters of Pelletier in his contest against Governor Foss appear to depend most upon the timely news of the strike.

Three politicians say the idea is broadcast that it was the District Attorney for Suffolk County who "settled" the strike in Boston.

The strike on the Boston Elevated was of such recent occurrence that there is no excuse for the prevalence of this notion anywhere. However, there is one widely appearing Democratic in Boston who says the burning and the ending of the settlement of the strike. To the popular mind, even, therefore, the Sunday AMERICAN appears to be a reversal of the strike on the "L."

By JOHN F. FITZGERALD.

I AM very glad to comply with the request of the Sunday AMERICAN for a brief chronicle of how the strike of the Boston Elevated was brought to a happy ending.

At the same time I want to say that personally I deeply regret that the Elevated strike has found its way into print.

So far as the career is themselves concerned, I am happy to absolve them from all responsibility for the appearance of this question in the contest between Governor Foss and District Attorney Pelletier for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The career which it was through Governor Foss—and through a State Board of Conciliation—that Governor Foss had made a fair Board of Conciliation—that it was through that body that the strike was settled.

Fileene's STORE CHAT

TOMORROW the curia will go up on the fourth week of the new Fileene store. To us the retrospect is wholly pleasant. Our friends have come and seen and in large degree approved. We have been alert to correct the mistakes of the initiatory days, and our constant endeavor shall be to crowd as closely as possible to the goal of perfect service.

In a purely commercial sense, results of the past three weeks exceeded our highest expectations. The public bestowed the full measure of its confidence in us and our merchandise. More than once the purchasing has been limited only by our capacity to sell. But now normal conditions have been reached, and we anticipate being able to meet your requests with every facility.

Those groups of merchandise upon which the business is founded and which made the old store a real institution in New England, are here in such amplified form and in such pleasant environment that they have met with tremendous added public favor.

At the same time the new shops, containing wearing apparel and toilet accessories not contained in old store stock, have come into quick appreciation.

Unaltered praise has been bestowed upon the personal service bureau features of the new store. These aim at minimizing the vexations of shopping and to enhance its pleasure. In a word, we aim to make trading with us an actual relaxation.

Three personal service features are not theoretical. They are actual. And their scope is surprisingly comprehensive.

The beautiful, restful restaurant on the eighth floor is sought by many hundreds of New Englanders every day. We do not stop with serving luncheon. Breakfast and afternoon tea are to be had as well. And our friends have nothing but praise for these morning and afternoon repasts, served quickly and at moderate cost.

Prohibition of gratuities has proved a relief to every one concerned.

We scarcely dare talk much of that corner of the second floor where the little folk have a playroom all to themselves, for it has proved too small from the beginning. But we wish to drop a word to those mothers not yet acquainted with it, concerning the children's barber shop on the second floor. Its little topknots are looked after in a way quite new to Boston.

OVERHEARD

"What a good time you people have doing business. You're just like a big family."

"Think of making school dresses for my girls when I can find here made-ready ones better and at less expense."

"Can you tell me where to find misses' corsets?"

"One street down, first shop on the right, madam."

"Streets and shops what an ideal arrangement!"

(Standing before a mass of cases on the street of misses' shops).—"Why, I wouldn't be afraid to let Molly come here alone to get her school coat. Everything seems in such perfect taste."

"Merchandise beautiful and patterns exquisite. The matching of outer skirts and rugs an excellent and original idea."

"The shirtwaist shop has the largest assortment of waists of any store I was ever in. The evening wraps seem to stand out alone, and the entire display of Fileene wearing apparel is simply wonderful."

Fileene's

FILENE methods of preparing, perfecting and assembling merchandise seldom if ever have been exemplified more strikingly than in this Autumn showing of outer apparel for women and young women in our quiet little shops.

Here are shown American adaptations of fashions the great French designers have decreed. Reproductions they are, but with the genius of Paris back of them. And an array of real French clothes that will delight those who come to see.

Autumn Street Suits

A Filene tailored suit and an ordinary tailored suit!

There's a difference easily seen when you know Filene suits. Materials are chosen by our experts, usually right in the mill.

Before a quantity of material is selected a piece is made up that we may know if it is suited to the particular style for which planned. It is tested for wool, then shrunk and sponged. It is put through a rigid examination—that, when passed, makes it worthy of a Filene suit.

Our representatives are continually searching for new styles. We have not taken up with any fashion without considering its reason for being. Each line, each color, each detail of trimming must add to the beauty or attractiveness of the suit.

Coats are shaped, not simply stiffened. Materials are cut over carefully proportioned patterns.

They not only fit. They have line.

Skillful tailoring, careful pressing and a critical attention to details mark the difference in Filene workmanship and ordinary workmanship.

At $25.

Suits of tweed, homespuns, serges, chevron weaves and mannish mixtures. Plain, straight tailored styles. Smart little cutaways with straight seams backs. Frequently it is a touch of braid, the cut of a rever or the front fastening that gives these suits at $25 the earmarks of custom made suits.

Six different Norfolk styles alone in this collection.

We have built suits not only for the regular sizes but for the unusual figure as well.

At $35.

Smart tailored suits of men's serges, mixtures, homespuns and Winter weight worsteds and the wooly zibelins fashion likes for the coming winter.

Plain tailored semi-fitted models where careful tailoring and cutting and the excellent material give the note of distinction.

Busy people for many weeks have been building into these suits the style and fashions of the imported and higher priced models.

A little suit of brown or blue and black striped zibelins has a high waisted shirred back with tiny lacings of brown leather. The new shaped collar is broad over the shoulder and short in front.

Another suit of blue or black serge, the coat cut long in the back, fastened with heavy black silk. Silk frocks, braided with the front. A collar of the colored serge gives the suit an air of Paris.

Just two of the many examples that hint of the goodness of these suits distinguishing the Filene tailored suits from just a tailored suit.

Filene One-Piece Dresses

Planning starts with materials. Which are the new patterns? Are they all wool? Are the colors good? Are they sponged and shrunk? Are the materials that will adapt themselves to these dress styles?

Then styles are chosen. This one for its good bodice, that one for its cuff; another for its unusual smart collar or good skirt.

Under this method of working, with personal care and attention given, these little dresses cannot but be right in quality and style.

Starting at $8.75 is a navy blue Panama coat dress, buttoning down the front

GARDNER'S INJURY WILL NOT KEEP HIM OUT OF BIG SERIES

Experts Say That Larry Will Be Able to Play in Ten Days.

NO RELIABLE SUBSTITUTE

Clyde Engle and Neil Ball Both
Unable to Play Third
Sack.

IN the eighth inning of yesterday's game at Detroit, Larry Gardner, greatest of third basemen in existence, was hit by a hot bat from Dick's bat, broke the little finger of his right hand at the joint. Larry was attempting one of the diving stunts that have made him famous, and by slightly miscalculating the course of the ball, suffered an injury which, it was feared, would prevent him from playing for some time in the World's Series. However, Gardner's Boston camp is of the opinion that the injury was not so serious as it appeared, and is of the belief that the finger will heal in time to permit Gardner to play in the big contest.

After sustaining the injury, Gardner talked easily to the bench, where a heavy examination by Trainer Quirk and Manager Stahl led to the immediate assumption of a physician.

Will Be Back in 10 Days.

The bones snapped readily back into place and in the opinion of the doctor, and in the opinion of the players, who have experienced similar fractures, the brilliant Red Sox third sacker will be able to resume open air play in ten days, or about a week before the Giants knock up with the Sox. Manager Stahl expressed an opinion that the permanent results of the break, which to mind a similar injury which a suffered himself several years ago, and which was well enough to permit his play for a week after it occurred.

Joe Madden, the former catcher, who acts as coach and third base for the Tigers, and who has suffered about as many broken fingers as any man in baseball, conferred with Manager Stahl. Joe placed his hand on the outside limit of the finger and said: "It's not so bad as it looks."

He heard his belief on the fact that he bones went into place again so readily, hardly inspiring a perfect setting. It is only where the bones are not set rightly that the effects are felt for any considerable length of time afterwards.

The little finger, too, is the one digit, at least if a ball player had to have one of his fingers broken, he would see Manager Stahl without any great concern about future difficulties.

In the work of an infielder, this particular finger is seldom used much except in sliding in the direction of throws. And, a ball player will know that, it is just as easy to throw a ball by using the thumb and three fingers of the hand, as it is to do so with all four working.

Physician Gives Views.

Such, according to physicians, was the common opinion among the players and trainers in Detroit last night. Several of the Tigers, however, had to the fact that their break would make Larry a negative factor, so far as the series was concerned.

The Boston third physician, interviewed on the matter, expressed the opinion that Gardner would be able to play in ten days, or about a week before the Giants knock up with the Sox. However, Gardner's Boston camp is of the opinion that the injury was not so serious as it appeared, and is of the belief that the finger will heal in time to permit Gardner to play in the big contest.

OH YOU SOX FANS, COME ON. BOOST STAHL AUTO FUND

Now Is the Time to Send in Your Contribution, So Get Busy.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS

Leader of Boston's Own Champions Deserves Best the Rooters Can Give.

WITH a dollar here and a dollar there, together with many smaller contributions, added to the $25 received from Mayor Fitzgerald, and another $25 from an anonymous "fan," the Jake Stahl fund took another jump yesterday.

Two letters, one from a young woman "fan" and the other from a man, showed the representative character of the contributions. The young woman "fan" is very well known in Chicago, but asked that her name be not used. She read in the Boston AMERICAN about the proposition of the city of Boston to give Jake Stahl an automobile for his popular subscription, as an appreciation of what "Big Jake" has done for the city by winning the American League pennant. This morning she wrote, enclosing $1:

"I take out my hat to Mr. Marshall of Boston (who originated the Jake Stahl fund). I am a great admirer of his and take pleasure in contributing a dollar to the auto fund. If Jake were winning the pennant for a Chicago club, I would take a day to raise the required amount. A CHICAGO 'FAN'."

Will keep the Tip in Repair.

Enclosed $1 for Jake Stahl's automobile fund. He surely deserves one. I will guarantee to make all his repairs free for him for one year. That's what I think. Sincerely, GEORGE E. CARR.

35 Dundas street.

Major Fitzgerald has endorsed the proposition of giving Jake Stahl an automobile in appreciation of Stahl's services to the city of Boston.

Not only has the Mayor endorsed the proposition as one that should be carried out by the people of Boston, but he has given it his personal recognition by drawing on his own funds for $25 to help it along.

The Mayor of Boston is not a rich man.

GREAT MASS MEETING FOR THE RED SOX PLAN WELCOME FOR PENNANT WINNERS TODAY

(WHOOPER UP FOR THE RED SOX THIS AFTERNOON.)

HERE are the words of some of the songs to be sung this afternoon at the big Red Sox mass meeting at the National Theatre. Cut them out, take them with you to the meeting, and join in the big welcome home. The meeting begins at 5 o'clock.

TESSIE.

From the Silver Slipper.

(Official song of the Royal Rooters in Boston-Pittsburgh World's Series.)

TESSIE is a maiden with a sparkling eye.
Tessie is a maiden with a laugh;
Tessie doesn't know the meaning of a sigh.

Tessie's lots of fun and full of cheer,
But sometimes we have a little quarrel,
And we two.

Tessie always turns her head away,
Then it's up to me to do as all boys do.
So I take her hand in mine and say:

CHORUS.

Tessie, you make me feel so badly,
Why don't you turn around,
Tessie, you know I love you madly.

Babe, my heart weighs about a pound.
Don't blame me if I ever doubt you.
You know I wouldn't live without you.

Tessie, you are the only, only, only.
(To be sung by Miss Madeline Dooly.)

Who will sing "Tessie" at to-day's Red Sox mass meeting at the National Theatre.

THE GRAND OLD GAME OF BASEBALL.

VERSE.

Words and music by Lawrence H. O'Connor.

NOW the Red Sox look like winners,
They don't play like new beginners.
Their western trips were marked
With great success.

With our star, the great Trix Speaker,
By Jake Stahl, the pennantsacker.

Flies like the game with wonderful finer.

And the fielder, Harry Hooper, Heines
Wagner needs no tutor.

Joe Wood, and Yerkes, Carlgan,
O'Brien.

Lewis, Bradley, Gardner, Hall—were born to play baseball—
Tip your hats to Garland Stahl—he's doing fine.

CHORUS.

Ge, but there's nothing like that grand old game.

The grand old game of baseball
All through the nation it has won its fame.

The greatest game of all.
Ge, but it's jolly to just be a fan.
You always find him ready at the call.

Come with me, you'll agree that it's great to see
The grand old game of baseball
We've got to win.

Words by Howard H. Johnson. Music by Irving Berlin.

COME on you rooters, come on you rooters.
Come on and watch the Red Sox get busy.
They're going to do it, they're going to do it.

Win Over the Athletics, While Yanks Are Losing, Does the Trick.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 21.—The Browns moved out of the cellar in today's game, a 4-1 victory by the club over the Athletics. The victory was the first since the team was rechristened as the Browns in 1912. The team had lost 10 of its last 11 games, and was in a cellar position. The victory was due to a combination of factors. The pitching was excellent, with the team's ace pitcher, Duffie, leading the way. The batting was also good, with several home runs being hit. The defense was solid, with several key plays being made. The victory was a morale booster for the team, and it is hoped that it will lead to a better season.

WILL RAISE TEN MILLION TO BUILD NATIONAL HIGHWAY

This Amount to Be Subscribed by Automobile and Accessory Manufacturers for Crushed Rock for Stone Road Between New York and San Francisco

By J. C. KERRISON.

A movement is under way to raise ten million dollars among the motor car and accessory makers of this country to aid in the building of a stone highway between New York and San Francisco, to be completed April 1, 1916, in time for the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

The building of the road will be left to the States and counties through which it passes. The crushed stone to be used in the building of this road will be purchased from the funds raised in the motor car trade.

At a dinner in Indianapolis recently approximately $200,000 was pledged.

The plan to raise the $10,000,000 from the motor industry is one of the most practical and rational yet suggested for the good roads act. The plan is to be raised by January 1, 1913, a little over three months. The plan is to collect from every motor car maker for every car produced, when the car is sold, a sum of $100,000,000. Cash or stock will not be collected, but donations also may be made. The plan is to use the money to build the road in the most economical way possible.

With the manufacturers and dealers the plan is to collect a third of 1 per cent. each year for three years. The plan is to use the money to build the road in the most economical way possible. The plan is to use the money to build the road in the most economical way possible.

The plan originated over a year ago in the fertile mind of Carl O. Flaherty of Indianapolis Speedway fame, and who during the last twelve months has been accumulating data on the cost of road construction, cost of road materials, cost of road bridges, cost of cement mile posts, etc.

In order that every subscriber to the fund will be protected in the construction of any road to be started while the coffee-sugar has been gathered, and for any reason, the plan should fail, all money will be returned to those having made payment with interest at 5 per cent.

Having the required amount guaranteed by 1915, it will be possible to complete the work by 1916, so that the road may be used by motorists attending the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which opens in San Francisco in the summer of 1915.

Instead of getting all of the financial backing from the manufacturers and dealers, the plan includes the co-operation of all car owners in the country. This is possible by three ways:

First, a class of membership of $25 a year, another $100 a year and a third of $1,000 a year. Each class of membership will be open to all car owners of different types, and each member according to his class, and special will receive a number of shares in the road or other money raised in the fund in 3 years.

Route Not Selected.

The plan does not call for any particular highway route across the states. At present there are two or three transcontinental highways and the matter of deciding whether one of them or a different one is to be selected will be left to a committee of motorists interested in the road, which is purchased on a price which covers delivery at the railroad siding where needed.

Price for material made from 80 cents to $2 per cubic yard, depending on the distance the material has to be hauled. A committee of the road will be required for each highway and will be paid from the fund. The committee will be paid from the fund. The committee will be paid from the fund.

Orders Ten With Michelin Tires.

The Italian War Department has just ordered another hundred motor trucks. It is uncertain whether or not these trucks are intended for use in Tripoli. They will be equipped with Michelin tires.

Earlier in the year the Italian government had ordered a similar quantity of Michelin equipped motor vehicles which were used for the transportation of provisions and munitions. The trucks are to be delivered by October 13.

Worked Five Years on Electric Starter

Exhaustive Tests of System Installed on 1913 Moon Car.

"Five long years of preparation were necessary to perfect the Moon patented electric self-starting and lighting system with which the 1913 models are being equipped," says Charles Anderson of the Anderson-Tyler Company, New York, distributor of this car, with headquarters in the Motor Mart.

The tedious years of testing the system in the laboratory and the most exhaustive road tests were productive of a positive electric self-starting and lighting system. There are no cranks on the 1913 Moon models—no reliable are the electric self-starters.

The system is absolutely independent of lighting. This is a very important feature. The system is absolutely independent of lighting. This is a very important feature.

There is an entire absence of electrical complications. No wiring, no switches, no other electrical paraphernalia are employed. The only wiring under the hood is that for the battery and the starter.

The Tragic Life Story of Chester S. Jordan How at Last He Finds Comfort in Religion

"I Am Ready to Die," Says
Condemned Man When Sister
Says Council Won't Act.

The four preceding chapters in the life story of Chester S. Jordan, of domestic violence with his early life, the murder of his wife, Barbara, who was formerly the barkeeper at the "Horse Shoe" saloon, the trial and the execution of the defense to show its insanity. A dramatic appeal to the trial was the sudden insanity of one of the jurors. Jordan's lawyers were called to the United States Supreme Court but had no chance to secure a retrial on account of the insanity of Juror White. When the appeal was denied, Jordan was ready to be executed within the week beginning today.

CHAPTER V. Execution.

Shortly after the United States Supreme Court (Chief Justice) Jordan's appeal for a new trial in public became aware of a change in the condemned man's attitude. He was no longer a victim, but a man who was ready to die. He was no longer a man who was ready to die, but a man who was ready to die.

It was a relief to the public to know that the condemned man was ready to die. He was no longer a man who was ready to die, but a man who was ready to die. He was no longer a man who was ready to die, but a man who was ready to die.

By Mrs. Mary E. Jordan.
"For four long years I have had this shadow before me. It seems so strange to me that I should be here. I am ready to die. I am ready to die. I am ready to die."

boy should not go to the chair. But he was going to be punished about it. "All during these years I have suffered with my boy. I have felt this more than any one else. The state of justice will be served just as well to condemn the sentence to life imprisonment."

On Friday, the Thirtieth—was all stiller day—here because known that the Executive Council would not meet till September 21. The significance of this was all too plain to the public. It was the first time in the history of the state that the Executive Council had refused to meet.

This time it was Mrs. Joseph F. Lawrence who went to the jail and broke the news to the condemned man. She was the sister of the man who was executed. She was the sister of the man who was executed.

Insurance Companies Aiming to Force Their Discharge Must Answer to State Board.

James B. Carroll, chairman of the Industrial Accident Board, declared today that any liability insurance company attempting to force the discharge of an injured workman under the workmen's compensation law will be compelled to answer to the board for its action.

Following the enforcement of the new compensation law, the board has been made up of a number of large manufacturing establishments that its liability insurance companies were at once ready to avail out from the shape of their policyholders.

"If any company writing liability insurance under the new workmen's compensation law attempts to discharge a workman who has an old claim on his payroll, such a ruling would be tantamount to the spirit of the law, but a fearful hardship on the poor."

AUTUMN MILLINERY COMPLETE OPENING

MONDAY-TUESDAY-WEDNESDAY

The preliminary showing was three weeks ago. That was the precursor, the harbinger of Autumn Hats. Styles then were incipient, inchoate—on the borderland.

We will make much of this Millinery Opening. It pleases you—and helps business. But after the Opening, what? Just this! Every day practically the equal of Opening days. Strong adjectives applied to our French and American Hats would not be hyperbole. Our greatest difficulty is to translate their beauty into words.

It's a broad-gauged season. Your own taste is Fashion's law. You may select as caprice suggests or fancy dictates.

Glance at a few of them, random chosen. Just as if Beethoven's Turkish Dance had waited through Gergotte's, Esther Meyer's, Talbot's, Alphonse's and Suzanne's windows, and emerged as Hats. Happy the women who wear them.

Tailored Hats, with the touches that make simplicity elegant $3.95 to $22.50

Paris sends choice shapes untrimmed, and the flowers and feathers to adorn them.

Pride in an Autumn Hat is natural. There is pride and pride, pride of purchase and selection, of choice in a Hat full trimmed; there is pride of creation and construction, of frugality and self-confidence in the Hat made by the wearer. We serve you in either way.

MEN'S AUTUMN TIES

We think you'll say these are the richest Four-in-Hands you've ever seen at $1.00. They are wide open-end shapes neatly finished by hand. Made of the new inverted-rep silk cloth. "When Mrs. Mary Scott Townsend retained the old mansion roof to escape a hoodoo, she didn't know that the ghost went with it!"

"Hi'm sorry, ma'am," said the third butler, "but no self-respecting butler can stand THAT! Hi'e's not a bit like a respectable h'English ghost!"

How Mrs. Mary S. Townsend Built Her Mansion Especially to Escape a Hoodoo, Only to Be Driven Out by "Spooks!"

THERE aren't any ghosts, and yet this is a ghost story. It wouldn't be one except for the fact that lots and lots of people think there are such things as ghosts. And in this connection you are advised to read an article which will appear in this magazine next week. It is written by a very great scientist, indeed, and explains illuminatively the insurmountable difficulties which any ghost would have to encounter to provide itself with clothes or bones. Every ghost ever known has either had clothes of some sort, or a skeleton. The ghost in this story had very good clothes, hence the pertinence of this paragraph.

Mrs. Mary Scott Townsend is one of the very foremost of American society leaders. She was formerly Mary Scott, of Erie, Pa., a niece of "Tom" Scott, of Pennsylvania Railroad fame. Her family was very wealthy—worth over 50 many millions.

Mrs. Townsend's beautiful mansion on Massachusetts avenue, Washington, long spoken of as the "Townsend Palace," has a deserted and melancholy effect—(we are approaching the story). The front doors and windows are boarded up, the two magnificent antique statues which flank the outer steps, and which are worth thousands of dollars, are boxed in, and the great gardens surrounding the house, with their huge elms and masses of rhododendrons show signs of desertion. The place is abandoned, and it is doubtful whether Mrs. Townsend will ever again occupy it. Whim? Well, that's what some say. What do the others say? Well, they say that the most extraordinarily sensational and popular spook that ever was known had a lot to do with it—a spook that stuck to its own roof and moved with it when everything else in the house that it formerly occupied was taken to the scrap heap!

But how did it get a chance to move with its roof to the Townsend palace? That is the very remarkable story now to be unfolded.

When she was a very little girl, Mary Scott once interviewed a witch. Among the other pleasant things, she learned from this oracle was that if she should ever undertake "to sleep under a new roof," she would within the following year die. This cheerful admonition took such a hold upon the girl that for many months she hardly slept at all, and in all the years which followed, she carefully refrained from sleeping under a "new roof."

Some years later, when she married and became Mrs. Townsend, she tired of Erie and sighed to live in Washington. Her husband was perfectly willing, for there is no place in the world where millions count for so much as they do at the national capital.

Mr. Townsend had plans drawn up for a veritable palace and the site selected was that occupied by the old-fashioned residence of old Judge Hillyer.

Negotiations for the purchase of the place were rapidly concluded and workmen set about demolishing the Hillyer dwelling, when Mrs. Townsend directed her husband to stop the work.

"I'm so sorry, Dick," she said, "but we shall have to give it all up. I forgot about the witch!"

Then followed an explanation of the incident before referred to, and though Mr. Townsend did his best to convince his young wife that the witch's warning might safely be disregarded, he had little success, and finally decided to humor his wife's misgivings.

Nothing was done on the work of destruction for several days and the Townsends looked around Washington for a place to purchase. If his wife wouldn't sleep under a new roof, the only thing to do was to buy an old place. But was it? Why couldn't they build their palace as they had intended and simply put in an old roof instead of a new one? That very idea occurred to Mrs. Townsend one afternoon while house hunting, and she at once suggested it to her husband.

"The very thing," assented Mr. Townsend, "we'll just retain the old mansion roof of the Hillyer house and set it on our new place."

And that is what was done. The old mansion roof rove today exactly where it originally was, covering the middle part of the Townsend palace—though of all the roof of tan color structure not a stone or beam or plank remains. In this way, superstitious Mrs. Townsend was enabled to sleep under an old roof, and thus to outwit the hoodoo with which she was threatened, and so pleased was she with herself over the ruse she had worked, that it may be said that she slept well.

That is—for a while. Little did Mrs. Townsend know when she bought the Hillyer place that a tragedy had been enacted under that very roof which she had been at such pains to preserve. Nor did she know that, according to the most advanced spiritualists, the roof is the most important part of a dwelling place, and that a spook came for nothing else so long as it has a roof over its head.

Yes, twenty-five years ago, a terrible thing happened in this same Hillyer residence.

The Judge's daughter, Bessie, whose path of true love did not run smooth, took her poison and died. For years afterwards, it is said, the ghost of the unfortunate Bessie Hillyer haunted the place, but when the place was sold to the Townsends not a w if it was mentioned regarding it.

"They are going to tear the building down, anyway," the owners probably figured, "and with the building gone, the spook will have to look for another home." If the Townsends heard of visitations of the spooks they undoubtedly agreed to the same effect. What was finally decided to retain the old mansion roof, if never occurred to them that in that very roof was hiding poor Bessie Hillyer's unquiet spirit!

Some months ago, one of the parlor maids started up in answer to a summons from Mrs. Townsend. Half-way up the stairs she saw a young girl in a long dress being in a hurry to go down, but her attention was attracted by the fact that the young woman's entrance to her was attended in the fashion of a quarrel of a ventriloquist. (You see, she had clothes!) She quivered too, that the only outward expression was a sad and agonized expression.

Respectfully stepping aside to let the girl pass, the maid almost nervously for the fourth of the dress when the girl markedly vanished from view. She simply "wasn't there any longer," as the maid would describe the incident.

Well, all I say, Ma'am, was the only satisfaction the frightened maid got from the housekeeper, so that she had better keep your mouth shut about it, for if the Mrs. should hear of it she will surely not excuse you. She was foolishly rich to be bothered by such a little thing.

That is—for a while.

And then a few months ago, Mrs. Townsend heard the spooks with her own eyes.

It was in the daytime. She was sitting up after lunch when she saw the same spirit that the butler had described standing on the landing above, and they carried the article the butler had specified.

She raised her eyebrows to gaze in dazed surprise at the intruder, but while she was looking directly at them, the figures faded away and disappeared. Then she realized that she had seen the ghosts!

In three weeks at once made and unfortunate history of Bessie Hillyer came to light. The connection between that tragedy, the old evil roof and the spooks was disclosed to those who believe in such things.

Anyway Mrs. Townsend has left Washington. Her most intimate friends, from one of whom this story was obtained, believe that the evil action of ghost and hoodoo has been too much for her, but other intimate friends say that she merely went away because she got lonely.

A day or two later, however, the third butler had an experience which induced him to hand in his resignation.

It was just coming up the second flight stairs, mum," he explains to Mrs. Townsend, "when I saw no less than four of these blooming wooks, mum, amariah! along the wall. One of them, mum, carried a little drum, another a wash-board he held, a telephone, and the fourth a blooming jug! It was terribly funny, mum, and something I'll tell you all about, you know, mum, as I'll simply 'ave to give notice, mum that's all!"

Who the four ghosts might be, no one is able even to suggest, although Washington has long been celebrated as a city of haunted houses. In her day, poor Bessie Hillyer was very popular. But she is not dead in spirit. It is fortunate, and the presence of the four spooks observed in the third floor may be accounted for in that way.

That was the first Mrs. Townsend heard of the visitation of the ghosts and she paid little attention to the matter. But as she saw they came back, she was not so sure. The next day, she was in the kitchen, and the four spooks were in the house, and she was looking directly at them, the figures faded away and disappeared. Then she realized that she had seen the ghosts!

In three weeks at once made and unfortunate history of Bessie Hillyer came to light. The connection between that tragedy, the old evil roof and the spooks was disclosed to those who believe in such things.

Anyway Mrs. Townsend has left Washington. Her most intimate friends, from one of whom this story was obtained, believe that the evil action of ghost and hoodoo has been too much for her, but other intimate friends say that she merely went away because she got lonely.

"The butler, the housekeeper, the parlor maids, the chef—all the servants in turn saw the 'spook' and threw up their jobs."

"One day, it is even said, Mrs. Townsend herself encountered the four queer ghosts, and then she fled from her mansion."

My Frenchiest

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's new Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion. Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon.

WE are to wear our fur coats shorter this year. Such, at any rate, is the new edict for the elegantes, who are further commanded to don soft little slips of dresses in crepe or chiffons. They will be underlined with flesh pink charmeuse (if you take my advice) of exactly the same tone of coloring as the chosen fur, so that though there is an earlier break than heretofore between coat fur and dress fabric, it will not be very noticeable owing to the continuance of the color scheme.

Otherwise, of course, the shorter coats would have fatally unbecoming effects upon the figures of their wearers, and take inches from their apparent height.

But this very fact will prevent this particular fashion from becoming universally popular, for there are comparatively few women who can afford to don fragile chiffon frocks whenever they want to wear their fur coat, while then again those who study their health as much as, or more than, their appearance will give a thought to the unprotected and therefore uncomfortable condition of their "understandings."

So, even if they are going to include in a new fur coat this season they will choose one of the full length models, which will, of course, still be available, and which promise to be particularly attractive, too.

And such a choice I would consider to be an altogether wise one for the average woman with the ordinary allowance. The shorter coats are really only suited to those fortunate folk who can have two or three fur wraps at a time.

The leading "note" in all the coats, whether long or short, is their one-sided fastening and their general effect of looseness and width about the shoulders that is accentuated by the close swathing from hips to ankles. To secure the desired silhouette, it is necessary to fold one side of the coat closely about the figure. Then draw the other round and upward to the left hip, just as if you had just emerged from your morning tub, and because of the absence of any other garment worn, of necessity, obliged to hold your bath wrapper tightly about you!

Once you have discovered just the right knack of thus upholding your coat, you must adapt your movements to its narrowness!

Three-Skirt Dress of Turquoise Charmeuse and Tulle. A Gown That Can Be Worn in the Late Afternoon and Evening. The High Waist Line Is the Sign of the Debutante.

The Gown of White Tulle That Gaby Designed Herself. Only a Slender, Boyish Figure Will Dare to Adopt This Design.

By Lady Duff-Gordon.

IN Paris we are forced to admit that Mlle. Deslys is one of the Frenchest of the French, that she is having an undeniable effect on the fashions of the moment, I and all of my people are happy to "gown" this piquant little Parisienne, but of course she is not the first of French artists to come to me. Madame Rejane, Mlle. Mazza, Mlle. Vix and Mlle. Leconte are all on my list. Certain fabrics, certain lace even, I reserve for each of them. I would not, for instance, use the same fabrics for Mlle. Gaby that I use for Mlle. Leconte the models I designed for the little Countess de Vay, one of this year's buds.

Individuality is my fetish. It appeals me to see women going along year after year in the same old rut. Be original I say. And I know that you will notice the originality, the individuality in the designs I present this week. Naturally Mlle. Deslys lends herself delightfully to my designs. She has much originality herself, and you will see I am allowing you a gown that she designed herself. The sleeve has made quite an impression in Paris, and is already known as the "Gaby Sleeve." Of course, while designing these very new gowns for Mlle. Gaby, I realize that they will appeal to all women of slender, boyish lines. The debauche and the slender young matron will delight in the two evening gowns here shown. The turquoise charmeuse, with the over skirt and tulle of the same shade, is youthful, but has a certain dignity.

Different in its treatment is the gown of pink charmeuse and tulle. Notice that I have used the same fabrics in each costume, but how very different one is from the other.

The one has a slashed underskirt. The other has a scalloped underskirt.

Thus in every costume I give the individual touch that makes each gown I design a complete masterpiece in itself.

Tulle is rapidly taking the place of chiffons for tunics and over dresses. Not since 1860 has tulle reigned as it bids fair to reign this winter. The gown Gaby designed herself is entirely built of tulle, and I am making several debutante gowns of tulle and charmeuse, or of tulle and liberty satin.

I do not combine tulle with velvet. Chiffon still rules as supreme in all velvet combinations. Chiffons are also used for the bodice and for the gown that Paris is literally going mad over this Fall. Never have I had to design so many costumes for afternoon "at home." This is a revival of a fad of twenty years ago, and Paris is acting as though it were something entirely new.

I must enthuse over the Oriental gown shown here, for while I designed it especially for Gaby, I am deluged with requests for duplication. It has, as I have said, the spirit of the Orient, tamed by Paris. The drapery has to be done on the person who is to wear it. This I am most fastidious about. A mannikin, no matter how graceful and adaptable, never has the little mannerisms, the little tricks of motion that the one herself has. And drapery, to be successful, must fit into every motion of the wearer.

Paris has said good-bye to the pannier gown as it appeared even a few weeks ago. But undoubtedly the vogue for it has made itself felt in all the fall fashions. When the pannier is used, it is very low, hardly more than shallow puffs just above the ankles.

Paris, the city of fads and fancies! The feeling moment is no feeter than many of the fashions that spring up. The roses of yesterday are no less dead than the sleeves of a month ago! All sleeves this year must be long and should be crinkled.

Plush Comes Into Its Own Again. By Lady Duff-Gordon.

THIS is to be a plush season. Not for many years has this sumptuous fabric been so used as it is to be this Winter. Silk plush of the most supple texture in mole, green and black will utterly overpower the velvet of the past ten years. Hats, wraps, gowns and tailored costumes are made of it; in fact, to quote a bright little American girl who was seeing the shops in the Rue de la Paix for the first time, "Everything but lingerie and stockings seems to be made of plush."

The prevalence of this fabric means the continuance of the heavy laces and gold and metal trimmings. Fine laces do not harmonize with plush. They are barely useable on velvets. The very chic matrons who follow the fashion will of the wrap, and who care not how much money they spend, will have their handsomest evening gowns of brocade. The tulle and soft satins are to be left to the brides and brides. The matrons are favoring brocades and particularly gold or silver brocades that range in price from ten to thirty dollars a yard.

My Secret of Youth

No. 193---An Humble Aid to Beauty By Mme. Lina Cavallieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty

ME. CAVALIERI writes to-day of the aid a broomstick may become to beauty. "Jesting?" she writes. "Not at all. I wish to convince you that that everyday tool for keeping your home clean is a means of making yourself handsome."

She explains that to sweep vigorously and thoroughly is to cause the blood to rush to the muscles of the forearm and shoulders and back. "More valuable than any of these," she adds, "is that sweeping causes you to bend the body at the waist, thus strengthening the muscles that are weak in most women—those of the abdomen."

The proper use of the broomstick will straighten a bent back and round shoulders."

By Mme. Lina Cavallieri.

HAVE you ever thought, dear girl or woman reader, that the broomstick is an aid to beauty? Jesting? Not at all. I wish to convince you that that everyday tool for keeping your home clean is a means of making yourself handsome. Indeed, yes.

Sweeping itself is an admirable exercise. It gives a variety of activity by causing several of the least used muscles to stretch and contract. Sweep vigorously and thoroughly and you will feel the rush of blood to the muscles of your forearm, to the muscles surrounding your shoulder blades and to those at the small of the back. And, more valuable than any of these, it causes you to bend the body at the waist, thus strengthening the muscles which are weak in nearly all women, those of the abdomen, muscles which, allowed to become weak and flaccid, cause that part of the body to sag, giving an unlovely prominence with the ugly bulge at the hips which caused a visiting artist from Europe to sneer.

"Oh, the great American figure is not as I thought, the Almighty doctor. No, it is the unswerving form of a woman."

The American woman has learned to sweep and keep in control the upper half of her figure. Fine chests, with a graceful line from the shoulder to the bust, have grown common among American women. Many of them have mastered the not difficult art of deep breathing, so expanded the chest, developed the lung power and perfected waist may be turned their upper halves.

But the glaring defect remains—the slumped, capacious lower half of the body, which can only be made pliable and symmetrical with the rest of the body by exercise, among which none is so simple one I have named. Any household exercise that causes you to bend at the waist to the floor will keep the hips and abdomen in control, and in time diminish their size.

raised, to some extent, by sweeping, even though the broom be swathed in a damp cloth, by keeping your lips firmly closed. Dust is nearly always disease laden. While the dry disease germs might confuse their way through the air without causing breeding of disease, the darkness and moisture and the weakness of your lungs, to which they find their way through the open mouth, will stir them into new life and you will be the victim. Never, in any circumstance, inhale through the mouth. Occasionally to rid the body of an excess of carbonic acid gas you may safely exhale through the mouth to still further purify the body. Never, never take in air through the mouth. Don't allow the nose to become lazy. To inhale air is its duty. Force it to perform it. And aid it by keeping the nostrils free from clogging substances.

The broom stick will serve its best purpose for you by being shortened, cut to a length of two or two and a half feet, according to the "reach" of your arms. Grasping the stick firmly, with a hand at either end, hold it high above the head and draw the air in deeply, filling the lungs to their capacity with full draughts of air. When you have filled every coil of the lungs with the fresh air hold the stick firmly above the head, count silently at least five. This done, drop your arms slowly, your hands still clenching the stick, in front of you, below the waist. While doing this expel the air greatly until you feel that the lungs are almost empty of air.

It is not enough to say to most persons: "Shallow breathing is a bad habit. Correct it." The active human mind is an interrogation point and demands the courtesy and satisfaction of an answer.

Well, then, the results of shallow breathing are these: Sensitiveness to all the conditions that cause colds, and a disposition to allow colds to deepen into consumption or widen into pneumonia. Shallow breathing makes the liver lazy, and soon the body is bile flooded, the eyes becoming dull and the complexion yellow and lifeless. Clogged stomach and intestines are the marks of the shallow breather, for the body engine has not enough oxygen draught to burn up the fuel that has been thrown into it as food.

It is only the deep breather who enjoys life to its full and slows her enjoyment of it.

Beauty Questions Answered.

L. R. says her face has been disfigured with liver spots for a year and asks counsel as to their treatment.

Liver spots are often caused by anemia. Physicians term it chloroma. They are more common in men than in women. Often at the time they begin to appear in the complexion the skin besides more oil than usual. Besides a "run-down" condition of the system, they may be caused by extreme heat or excessive cold. Often a radical change of climate may occasion them. An undue pressure that disturbs the circulation, as a tight hat band, may be the chief cause. This lotion, applied with a sponge or camel's hair brush once or twice daily to the spots, is effective in many instances:

Willow bark 3 ounces
Rosewater 3 ounces
Chloride of ammonia 1 dram

One of the elements here also makes appeal in this letter:

"Will you kindly tell me what is good for pimples? I haven't many, but fear an outbreak. I use peroxide of hydrogen undiluted on my face and it has turned my hair light in front. I'm going to take my first shave soon, and I'm afraid that will spread the humors beneath the skin all over my face."

A advice internal remedies. Drink water freely, ten to twelve glasses a day, and eat much fruit and vegetables. That will drive from the system the humors which cause eruptions on the face. A week of this self-treatment will cause improvement. A month of it will work wonders for your complexion.

For this reason, if put for that of neatness, never lose an opportunity. If your figure has the defect I mention, to stoop to pick up a bit of paper or lint, or a scrap of cloth, from the floor.

Stoop from the waist. Don't resort to that trick of the indolent or the awkward, falling upon the knees when you pick up anything. Stoop in a graceful posture. Learn it. If the defect in your figure is the other sort, the broomstick is still your friend. But use it in a different way. If you have a weak, narrow chest, if you are round shouldered, you should apply yourself to development in a different direction and your sweeping should not be the main object, but an incident, of your broom handle exercises. And if you are of this habit be sure to protect your not robust lungs from the dust

Mlle. Sabary Djell in a Pose Showing Dislocated Right Arm.

In This Pose Djell's Hip Is Partly Dislocated, Producing an Effect Which Fascinates Her Paris Audiences.

WHEN Paderewski had each of his ten valuable fingers insured against fracture or dislocation that would interfere with his piano playing, the procedure was so novel that news of it was flashed around the world.

Now what would you think of a situation exactly the reverse—of a celebrated public performer who insured her joints, not against dislocation, but against the efforts of nature to restore joints already dislocated to their normal state?

That is actually what the celebrated Paris dancer, Sabary Djell, has done. It is as though she had said to the insurance agent: "My dislocated joints—my dislocated shoulders, elbows, wrists, neck, knees and ankles—are my fortune. If accident or nature puts me together again I am lost. My vocation is gone! I shall starve. For without my valuable dislocations I would be as a hundred other dancers—so novelty, no big salary put left in me!"

And so Sabary Djell, who is a very pretty and graceful, dark-eyed girl, with a well-trained gift for dancing, has taken out an accident policy for each of her joints. She made her money in Paris as a "dancuse Hindoue"—that is a Hindu dancer—because of certain extraordinary poses and gestures she used while dancing in Oriental costume. "Salome," as dance and as opera, was then the rage, and Sabary Djell did as all the other character dancers did—interpreted the scene where the daughter of Herodias dances before King Herod Antipas, and finally receives John the Baptist's papier mache head upon a charger.

She rather outdid the other Salome dancers by adding her dislocations to the conventional category of poses and contortions. In that exact costume, after throwing off the last of the seven veils, her special hip dislocation added a relation which the Parisians found fascinating. This emboldened her to greater wrists and elbows with out their customary natural alignment.

Alas! soon she discovered that these charming dislocations exacted a penalty from nature. Nature made reprisals in certain painful inflammations—nature's preliminary to healing those abnormalities which had come to be Sabary Djell's bread and butter.

"Mon Dieu!" said she to her maid, "if I lose my serious dislocations I shall lose my engagement! Come quick! Dislocate me, or we starve!"

And so Sabary Djell is the only dancer—probably the only woman dancer in the world whose joints are insured against "accidents" that will render them normal and like the joints of the rest of humanity.

NO WALL LASTS FOREVER

A long as men fight like brutes, every week should bring a reminder of the necessity of strengthening the peace movement.

Very soon there is coming a great gathering of the intelligent men of the world to fight against the war spirit.

And this very week in Washington, there is to be a convention of scientists, discussing the only real and useful war, the war against disease, and denouncing also the war of men against men.

The picture on this page is a picture of the future as the cynic sees it.

Men who always judge the future by the past stand at the stern of the vessel studying the wake, instead of standing at the bow and looking ahead, declare that war always will be BECAUSE WAR ALWAYS HAS BEEN.

If these men had lived a few centuries ago they would have said that cannibalism always would be, because cannibalism always has been.

And men that are now seventy or eighty years of age remember very well when they themselves said, "Slavery always will be, because slavery always has been."

But men have abandoned cannibalism, except in the most shameful and degraded quarters of the world. And men have abolished slavery—at least the slavery of the body.

Just as surely as progress is the rule of life on this planet, men in an early day will abolish war—and it will be forever forgotten.

This is not to say that declarations in favor of peace, and Hague tribunals, and intellectual and moral walls built up against warfare will stand forever.

Men forget conscience in anger. Nations disgrace themselves in the boasting and the excitement of warlike feeling.

The wall that has been built by patience, earnest men and women will perhaps, and probably, be swept away one day.

We shall have war again, of course. But come

The forces that work for peace have built a Strong Wall of Conscience, Commonsense, Public Welfare, to hold back the brutal wars that have disgraced history.

Cynics say that the wall will not last, that war, expressing men's brutal passion, will sweep away any peace wall, and bring back the old conditions when the hour comes. That may be. That the Wall of Peace may have to be repaired a thousand times. But it will stand one day, and in a day still later men will even forget why it was ever built.

upon the nation, the statesmen, the citizens, whose voice is for war, and against decent, peaceful and just settlement.

A hole may be made in the fortifications of peace. And brutality may spread over the land, and hundreds of thousands die, and prosperity be destroyed, and humanity set back a century.

But it will only be for a moment.

Walls are broken down, and they are repaired.

And after a while, THE WALL ITSELF IS NO LONGER NEEDED, and men forget why it was built.

A huge wall surrounds the Empire of China. It is broken down here and there, small vegetable gardens are planted on top of it, houses are built here and there along the crumbling surface. And the Chinese peasants wonder who built it, why it was built.

And those that make war against China now, in mean and cowardly fashion, because she is helpless, ignore the wall entirely.

It stood against the Tartars for a full century.

Tartars went through and took China, and they rule there now, in the thinking minds of China.

A wall of another kind until very lately surrounded the great City of Paris. It was built to keep out the enemy. And when the enemy appeared on the heights of St. Cloud, the wall was a joke, for every cannon ball easily went over it, above and beyond the famous "fortifications" and into the heart of the city.

That wall is removed now, the fortifications are knocked down, the Frenchmen who remember them scarcely know why they were built.

The first step in this world against an evil of any kind, whether it be in the individual striving to conquer individual evil, in the nation, fighting against slavery, or in the whole of humanity fighting against war, the steps are the same.

First, all effort at betterment seems hopeless; the individual says, "I cannot change," the nation says, "I will not change," and humanity as a whole says, "SUCH CHANGE IS IMPOSSIBLE."

Then, that which seemed impossible seems faintly possible. Then it seems probable. Then the first steps toward reform are taken.

Then something is absolutely done, the taking of a powerful resolution, the building of a great wall, the gathering of congresses of the nation—something is done to indicate that conscience is awake, and an effort at least is made.

Every step is taken painfully, slowly. Cynicism mocks the good intention and then the good effort.

Commonplace mental dullness says that nothing will be done.

Something done. Then the critics and the fools say that it will not last.

And it does not last. BECAUSE THE RESULT IS ACHIEVED AND THE MONUMENT, WALL OR LAW IS NO LONGER NECESSARY.

They had laws in France once forbidding the peasants to eat the bodies of those that died of the plague. They have that law no longer. For men no longer die of the plague, and thanks to the French Revolution, men are not so poor as to eat the bodies of the dead.

They had a law in England which set the poor people aside in "hundreds" and the hundred was held responsible for every crime committed, from theft to murder. And theft and murders were common in every hundred.

The hundred no longer exists, and it is no longer needed. And the gallows that dotted every highway have disappeared. And the stocks have gone and the ducking stools—and all the other horrors that men said must always be BECAUSE THEY ALWAYS HAD BEEN.

Men have now reached the stage at least of building an intellectual wall of conscience, law and international agreement to hold back the horrors of war.

The wall may break, probably it will break. But it will be rebuilt more strongly than ever. And eventually it will crumble away and be forgotten and not needed—and those that live under a real civilization will wonder at it, as we wonder now at the ruins of the old Chinese Wall.

"It's a bear!"
"It's a bear!"
"It's a bear!"

Take it from Philby, who took it from Aristotle and got all the credit of being the original author.

But it is a different sort of bear.
It's a "Scottish" bear and there is the haw haw! I'm sitting on the high side of a valley and filling the welkin with the agony he is squealing out of the bapine.

There's another way to make certain this is a scene in Scotland. Imagine the thirsty gentleman on the extreme right. He is quaffing a wee drop from a horn flask and not offering his companion a taste of it. It is wonderful how the imagination so cleverly gets the Scotch atmosphere into this picture.

But to return to the bear.
In the olden days Scotch bears were not wild, but were charming companions, vying with the dogs as household pets. Today the Scotch bears are the most ferocious animals in all Scotland. Not even harrying a Scotchman who has lost a shilling.

The bapine did it!
Not one, but thousands and thousands of them, continually wheedling and sighing and screwing away for hundreds of years, so wrought up the sensitive bears that they lost their tempers completely.

When the Scotch began herding sheep they used to take their bapines along to keep themselves as miserable as possible, dearly loving misery. The sheep didn't mind the bapines. That's why they were sheep.

The dear little bears that used to come out of the dense forests and greet the shepherds with a merry "Wu-wu!" ran back frightened at the first sounds of the bapines. Later they used to come out and pined with the shepherds. Much as these bears longed to gambol about on the greenward with the little lambs, they were not at any moment a bapine start up walling through its many noes.

Finally the bears gave up all attempts to reason with the bapine players. The bears reasoned among themselves that any one who would play a bapine when he didn't have to was unable to reason. From that moment the Scotch bears became ugly. They growled about night, and by days they got so they would fill their ears with mud and suddenly spring forth and crush a bapine player to death. But it was wild and dangerous work, for frequently the bapine, well filled with air, would keep on playing several minutes after the shepherd had exchanged it for a garden harp.

Our Great Investigation

Eminent Citizens on Committee Energetic Enquiry Promised.

OUR Great investigation into the high cost of living begins tomorrow.

The committee which will probe this matter to the bottom consists of John D. Rockefeller, George Brock, J. Pierp Morgan, Dick Enright, James J. Hill, The Dingbat Family, Jeff Torsau, Ad West and John D. Archbold.

Among the witnesses to be subpoenaed will be Mr. Beef, to explain the high cost of steak; Mr. Rooster and Mrs. Hen, who will be questioned concerning the great price of broilers and eggs, and the Messrs. Fish, Duck, Hog and others.

The inquiry, it will be seen, goes directly to the root of the high cost of living. There is no attempt to dally with the middleman. If pork is high, subpoena the porker and get the facts at first hand.

The investigation, however, will not conflict with the proposed country life commission.

A STRANGE EXPERIENCE.
TO THE EDITOR—Recently while reclining in a Morris chair in my own house, the walls suddenly fell outward, the roof, however, remaining in place, a very fortunate thing for me, since it was raining heavily at the time.

With the walls down I had no protection against the horde of polar bears which I then observed making for my lobster. Evidently the Arctic animals thought it was the nearest thing to an ice box obtainable in Far Rockaway. With great presence of mind I picked up a siphon of saltwater from the table and sprayed the leading bear. Imagine my surprise when the animal sat up on his haunches, wiped the saltwater from his lips and said in a clear voice, "That's the chaser; but where's the whiskey?"

Pretty good for a bear, eh? J. WILSON, Pilot.

His Exclusive Costume.

THE customer came forward to attend to the nervous old boss who was mopping his bald and shining poll with a big handkerchief.
"And what can I do for you?" he asked.
"I want a little help in the way of a suggestion," said the old fellow: "I intend going to the French Students' masquerade ball tonight, and I want a distinctly original costume—something I may be sure no one else will wear. What would you suggest?"
The costumer looked him over attentively, bestowing special notice on the gleaming knob.
"Well, I'll tell you," he said, then, thoughtfully: "Why don't you sugar your head and go as a pill?"

Enterprising

IN a section of Washington where there are a number of hotels and cheap restaurants, one enterprising concern has displayed in great illuminated letters, "Open All Night." Next to it was a restaurant bearing with equal prominence the legend:
"We Never Close."
Third in order was a Chinese laundry in a little, low framed, tumble-down hovel, and upon the front of this building was the sign, in great, sprawling letters:
"We Waken, Too."

Extra vagant.

LITTLE Eleanor listened while her parents discussed the high cost of living. The subject was frequently talked about during the meals, and the high price of meals was particularly referred to. Eleanor, "frequent house" with the other children, also talked of "high prices" as she heard her father and mother talk.
One day her mother presented the family with a bouncing baby boy and Eleanor was delighted. A neighbor was asking her about the new baby, and Eleanor said:
"The doctor brought him to us. He's awful big, too. Don't you think my mamma was good to buy such a big fat baby when meat is so high?"

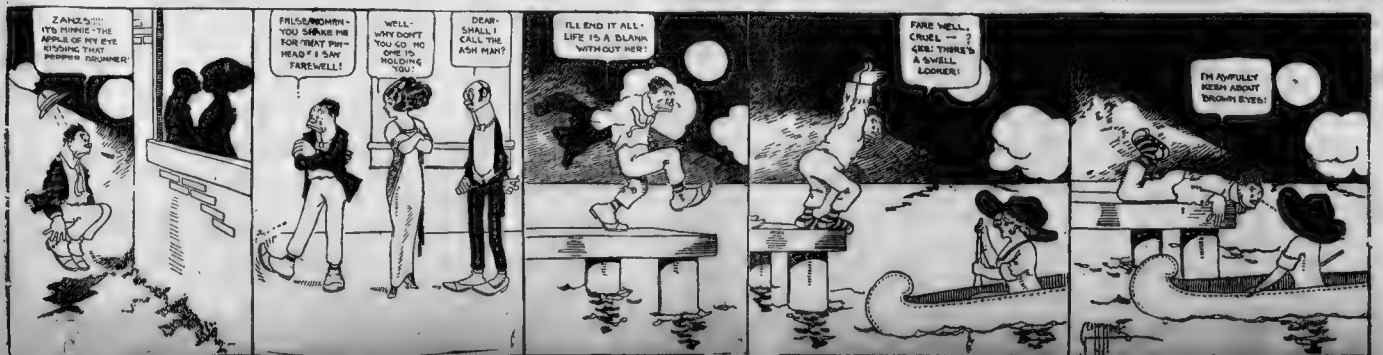

Minerva.

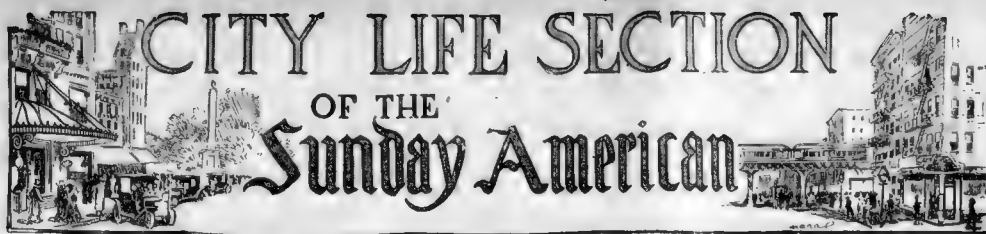

A FAMOUS spinster, known throughout the country for her charities, was entertaining a number of little girls from a charitable institution. After the luncheon the children were shown through the place in order that they might enjoy the many beautiful things it contained.
"This," said the spinster, indicating a statue. "is Minerva."
"Was Minerva married?" asked one of the little girls.
"No, my child," said the spinster, with a smile; "Minerva was the Goddess of Wisdom."

LAUGHS FROM "THE PASSING SHOW" — THE NEW WINTER GARDEN MEDLEY

Scene—Pier of the S. S. Cleveland.
 Collector of the port. Eugene Howard
 Lord Arthur Plantagenet
 Pantalotto. Harry Fox
 Boldenstein, his valet. Willie Howard

HARRY—Now that we've landed in America, and your salary's due to-day, I think I'll die charge you. No, on second thought, I believe I'll keep you.

EUGENE—Yes, you'd better keep me, or I'll tell everybody I see that you're not a real lord, but only a con artist.

HARRY—Well, I am a real lord, from Lord and Taylor's.

WILLIE—Yes, that's where you fit the counter.

EUGENE—Hey, you there! Give me your key.

HARRY AND WILLIE—Ta-ta-sa!

EUGENE—What on earth are you talking about?

HARRY AND WILLIE—That's our key.

EUGENE—No, no; I mean the key to your trunk. Come on, now; open it. How many suits of clothes have you here?

HARRY—I ain't gonna tell yuh; I ain't gonna tell yuh; are we?

HARRY AND WILLIE—We ain't gonna tell yuh. We ain't gonna tell yuh!

EUGENE—Who's that you've got with you, anyhow?

HARRY—Why, that's my talking dog; ain't yuh, huh?

WILLIE—Rub, r-rub!

HARRY—Does? Look. Vas haet du?

WILLIE—Hoo-gar!

HARRY—Und vas willst du?

WILLIE—Kooken!

HARRY—Does? Now tell me, vas ist ihr Name?

WILLIE—Ist-hahokovitch!

EUGENE—Say, what are you men trying to do, make a fool out of me?

HARRY—No; Nature saved us the trouble. (Exit)

EUGENE—Say, who are you?

WILLIE—Me? Oh, I'm his valet.

EUGENE—I see; you mean you are his valet.

WILLIE—No; valley. I'm his Levi Valley.

EUGENE—Where were you born?

WILLIE—In Ireland.

EUGENE—What part of Ireland?

WILLIE—The Bronx.

EUGENE—Well, what's your name?

WILLIE—Same like my father's.

EUGENE—And what is your father's name?

WILLIE—Same like mine.

EUGENE—No, no; I mean, what does your boss call you when he gives you your pay envelope?

WILLIE—He never has to call me. I'm always there.

EUGENE—Well, can you tell me your Christian name?

WILLIE—I? "Taxi"!—? . . . Murphy!

EUGENE—But you must have one name that distinguishes you from bartenders and baseball players?

WILLIE—Yes; I'm familiarly known as Jew-el.

EUGENE—Quite right, and I take it your full name is Julius?

WILLIE—Yes, and I got a better named Jack.

EUGENE—Of course, and his full name is—here, here; what are you trying to do, embarrass me before the whole audience?

WILLIE—No, I refuse to embarrass you.

EUGENE—Say, how did you get over to this country anyhow?

WILLIE—I played with the band on the boat. There is my violin and 'cello.

EUGENE—What did you play with the band?

WILLIE—I played poker with them. That's how I got the violin and 'cello. Try this violin. If it ain't any good I'll sell it to you.

EUGENE—Look here, now, I'm wasting time with you. If you want to come into this country, you've got to pay.

WILLIE—Why should it be pay-as-you-enter? I thought this was a free country.

EUGENE—It is free. Every man here is equal.

WILLIE—Yes, equal to anything. If it's a free country, is the grab free?

EUGENE—Of course not.

WILLIE—What do you charge for air?

EUGENE—Everything is free, except where the law stops you. For instance, on Sunday you can't play ball, get shaved, go to the theatre, or get a drink.

WILLIE—But outside of that you're just as free as if you were in prison.

EUGENE—Say, young fellow, what was your occupation in the old country?

WILLIE—I was a jockey. Smell this handkerchief. It's the only jockey Club I ever got a cent from.

EUGENE—You don't look like a jockey.

WILLIE—Not! Look here. There's a hair from the horse.

EUGENE—That never came from a horse. Why, that's a fine hair.

WILLIE—Sure. It came from a fine horse.

EUGENE—Did you ever ride in a Derby?

WILLIE—No, in just a regular jockey's cap.

EUGENE—That's nonsense. What posies do you know?

WILLIE—I know all the posies at the Winter Garden.

EUGENE—I mean horses. I don't believe you know anything about them.

WILLIE—Sure I do. I know a lot of race stories.

EUGENE—Well, didn't you ever ride any real horses in your races?

WILLIE—Oh, yes. Romeo and Juliet, Hoyo de Montecrey, Manuel Garcia, Regensburg.

EUGENE—Come, come. What are you talking about? You're naming different cigars.

WILLIE—Well, they all pull the same as horses.

EUGENE—What system do you use in your riding?

WILLIE—Usually the New York Central system.

EUGENE—That's what?

WILLIE—Well, we have what we call ragtime racing. You put salt on the horse's tail and he chases himself around the track.

EUGENE—Anything else?

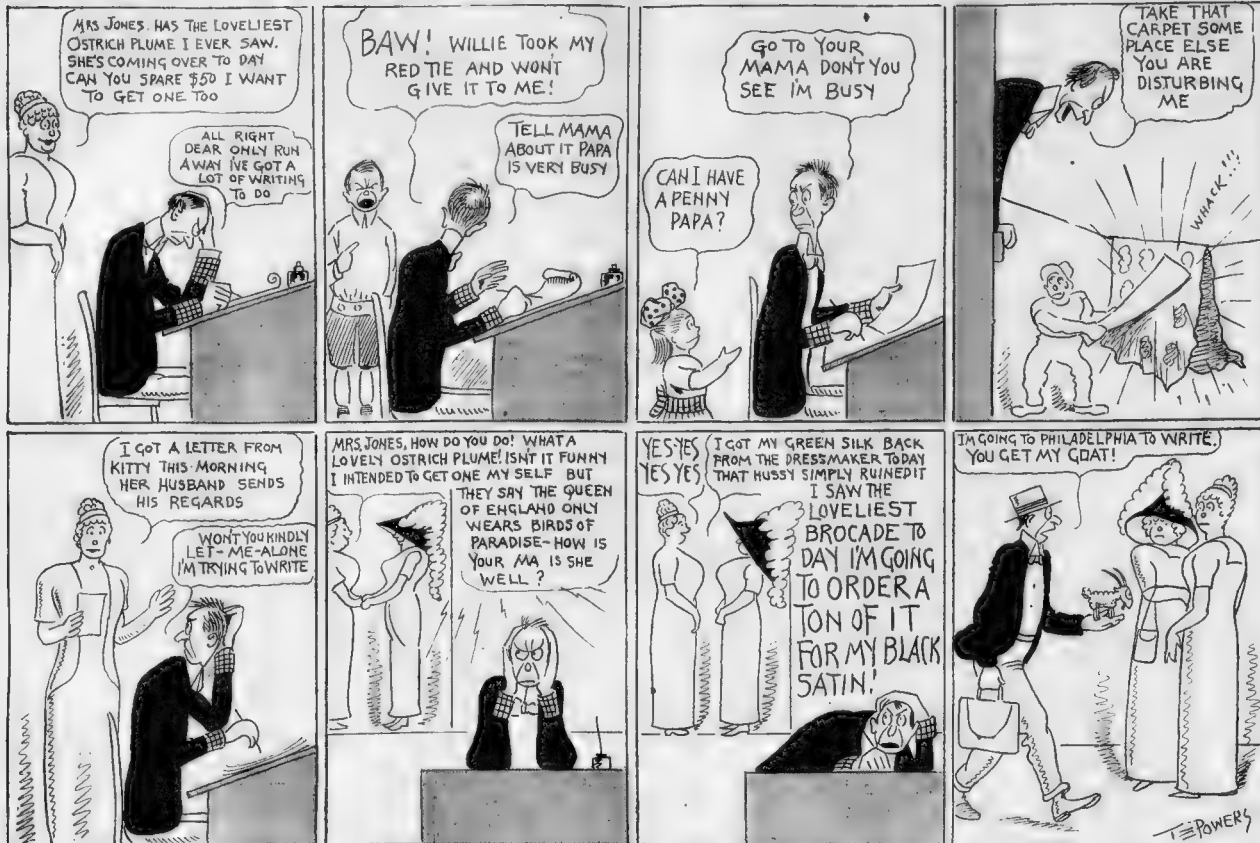

WILLIE—Sometimes you get the other horses to insult your horse, and then he runs away from them.

EUGENE—What kind of a horse did you ride?

WILLIE—I rode a turkey-trotting horse. Every time he took a step he'd slide.

Advance Sheets from the Diary of an

R. F. D. Carrier

MAYBE the R. F. D. carrier won't have his troubles when the new parcel post law goes into effect the first of next year. Under that law we can send through the mails any article under 11 pounds in weight and less than 4 feet in length. If one of these carriers should start a diary the first of the year it would run something like this.

THE new parcel post law is a bear. The mail carrying business in the country was a cul. sort of business at best in the old days when the express companies had a clench on the parcels. Now there is excitement enough to spare for everybody.

This morning I was collecting the mail from Mr. Perkins box when he came out holding a large Brahma rooster under his arm. The rooster had a misapplied law gone into effect the first of next year. Under that law we can send through the mails any article under 11 pounds in weight and less than 4 feet in length. If one of these carriers should start a diary the first of the year it would run something like this.

enough to blind you. This bird got away from me, and I called out to him to catch it.

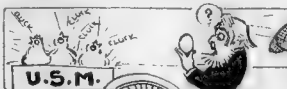

"Can't do it," he replied. "That bird was in your custody and if I touched it I could be pinched for interfering with the United States mail. You'll have to get it yourself!"

Make no mistake about it, a Brahma rooster can make Ralph Craig look like a slow coach when it comes to running. I chased this one across four fields, and might be chasing him yet if it hadn't caught in a fence.

I tried to make it enclose it in an envelope, but he wouldn't, and I had to tie the rooster up, legs and wings.

At the next farm I got one duck, two hens and a kitten. The duck got away, and I had to wade a pond after it, and in the meantime two of the roosters were fighting before a large and enthusiastic audience.

I was getting almost all right to the town when I heard a tremendous racket in the large box in which I had placed the animated mail. When I looked inside I found that one of the hens had laid an egg. As three of the hens and all the roosters were joining vigorously in the racket, there was no way of telling which hen was responsible.

Since the egg was naturally unstamped, I could not pass it through the mail, so I returned to the different farms from which hens had been mailed. Everybody that had mailed a hen claimed the egg, and as there was no way for me to settle the dispute I placed the egg in cold storage, and wrote a full account of the case to Washington.

Up to the present time the Postmaster-General has not replied. It is, however, a most important question, and doubtless the law officers of the Government are considering it with due deliberation.

Poetry Made Popular

WHY is poetry not more appreciated? Because it is too technical. If it were only made plain it would take the place of prose. At that, it is easy to get the essence of poetry if you have a good guide to it. Here everything will be explained and the hidden beauties, if any brought to the reader's attention.

First we have "I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls."

This is a song not a plain poem. You can tell that it is a song by the end of the stanza. A poem would end up with the statement that "You loved me still the same, whereas a song must end up. You loved me still the same, you loved me, you loved me still the same, you loved me still the same, you loved me, you loved me still the same."

This repetition is about the easiest way to tell a song from a poem.

We now give the first stanza, with explanatory notes.

I dreamt that I dwelt in marble halls,
With vaselets and safe at my side,
And of all who assembled within those walls,
That I was the hope and the pride.
I had riches too great to count; could boast
Of a high ancestral name;
But I also dreamt, which pleased me most,
That you loved me still the same;
That you loved me, you loved me still the same;
That you loved me, you loved me still the same.

Such dreams are commonly the result of what it is.

Let's call "hop" or "dope." When dreaming it is just as cheap to have a half of marble as one of mere brick or stucco.

"Vaselets." Probably a misprint for "vessels." As no doubt the dreamer would dream of moping up a few scops, scoopers, or goblets of refreshing naps.

"Sure." A person who's dreaming might as well be "the hope and the pride." Why not? Lots of men have dreamed that they were white horses.

"See remarks above regarding repetition."

Second stanza. Also note that the chap continued to love her "still the same" when she had the kink. Nothing surprising.

I dreamt that suitors sought my hand;
That knights upon bended knees,
And with vows no maiden heart could withstand,
They pledged their faith to me.
And I dreamt that one of that noble host
Came forth my hand to claim;
But I also dreamt, which pleased me most,
That you loved me still the same;
That you loved me, you loved me still the same;
That you loved me, you loved me still the same.

A knight, when not engaged in sparring an opponent, was always upon bended knees before some skit. A strange life.

Now you have the whole thing. Simple, isn't it? Let poetry have a greater place in your daily life after this.

(Another well-known poem will be considered next Sunday.)

Frolicsome Fashions for Fickle Females

GRAY, brown, plum and blue will be favored in the coming millinery. Parity will also be shown to long green.

Mousieus mousieus de soie dresses will be trimmed with sable bands. As heretofore, sidewalks in front of beer saloons will be trimmed with German bands.

Middy dresses are to be the rage for little girls; muddy ones for little boys.

Hair ornaments are coming back. Some of the newest are of marabout. Tall marabout that. Bald heads will be trimmed with beads of perspiration, as usual.

Auto wheel pins of silver with jeweled heads will be all the go. For avoiding accidents, however, safety pins should be worn.

Strip dresses will have vivid colors in the form of Roman stripes.

Of course those in prison stripes will not be roam'n' much.

Long wraps will be in vogue. The bad boy whose father is an adept with the slipper will not welcome this fashion note with joy.

Women travelers will welcome a parasol which folds in one minute. Conductors and others will welcome a woman's purse that unfolds in one minute, if such an invention is possible.

The prevailing colors in men's coat sleeves this year will be blonde and brunette, as always.

Beautiful long chains with heavy balls attached will be the prevailing fashion among police officials this Winter.

New dress sleeves are set on long shoulder lines; lingering lingerie petticoats are cut on slim, straight lines; men's shirts will be suspended from sagging wash cords.

A. H. Woods Presents the Newest European Operetta

From the German of "Die Frauenfresser," by Leo Stein and Karl Lindau; Music by Edmund Eysler; American Book and Lyrics by George Hobart.

What It Is All About:

The story of A. H. Woods' newest imported musical comedy "The Woman Haters' Club" shows how futile it is to oppose the fair sex. You find Major John Von Essenberg disappointed because of an imaginary misunderstanding with his fiancée, Marie Wilton. He organizes the Woman Haters' Club, which aims to save its members from the clutches of the fair sex. All goes well with the club until the major's young nephew is lured into membership. The nephew, Camillo, has a tender feeling for Tilly von Eberhardt, whose mother owns half of the castle in which the two families live. Camillo is a weak member of the club from the start, much to his uncle's disgust. Uncle John seems irrevocably blind to the charms of woman until his former sweetheart suddenly appears on the scene. Marie had always loved John, but the fatal letter of explanation of years ago had not been delivered. So John believed the worst. Many amusing complications develop through the division of the castle of Prenslan into two distinct and bitter camps, the women on one side, led by Tilly's very capable mother, and the major on the other side, attended by his Woman Haters' Club. As the story moves on toward the ultimate triumph of love over hate, members of the Woman Haters' Club drop out one by one until none is left but the major—and then he capitulates and folds Marie in his big arms. And thus is man and his selfish ambitions routed by woman's wit and affection.

The Herald

"The Woman Haters' Club" is graceful and melodious and an altogether splendid and enjoyable show.

The Transcript

"The Woman Haters' Club" is a novel and new idea in musical comedy.

The American

A. H. Woods' newest light opera production, "The Woman Haters' Club," will take its place as the first of the season's new musical plays to reach positive success, which Mr. Woods will discover as he watches the box office develop increased activity as the nights roll past.

The Journal

A. H. Woods was safe enough in his statement that "The Woman Haters' Club" could easily run along at the Tremont Theatre the remainder of the year. It is the breeziest musical comedy since "The Merry Widow" and the production is decidedly a fine, fashionable feather in Mr. Woods' hat.

The Post

A. H. Woods has a "big winner" in "The Woman Haters' Club." It met with instant favor from the audience, indicating permanent popularity. Has more than the usual number of elements to commend it, for the story is dainty and prettily told, the comedy is of the genuine sort, while the music is joyous and lingering.

The Globe

"The Woman Haters' Club" may confidently be expected to prove one of the most popular musical comedy successes of the season.

The Record

At last Boston is permitted to see and hear at first hand, with an original capital cast, a high-class musical production, in "The Woman Haters' Club." Eysler's music is charming, Hobart's book is funny and A. H. Woods' production is lavish.

WE have already had two fresh operatic importations from Europe and tomorrow night will bring the third to the Boston stage. Of the two that have been exposed to the light, Mr. A. H. Woods' "The Woman Haters' Club" must easily be conceded as the more promising, although its predecessor at the Tremont, "The Count of Luxembourg," which is now in the throes of a Broadway run, managed to draw substantial patronage when in Boston.

In almost every department of entertainment, however, "The Woman Haters' Club" clearly outshines its rival from over the sea. There is more than the usual allotment of novelty in the story of "The Woman Haters' Club" and its music is distinctly of the better grade without being too serious. Some of the songs in the piece, notably "It Was Marie," are already labelled "popular," and hotel orchestras will soon be serving them with food in the cafes. In the matter of people "The Woman Haters' Club" is happily inhabited. There is not a weak spot in the cast, a fact that has been generally commented upon during the week. Sallie Fisher, whose charm is most alluring, finds herself in very comfortable surroundings, with many choice opportunities to exercise her voice. In the face of a strenuous first week—that period in the life of a musical play when its ailments take definite shape—there is nothing to mar the belief of Mr. Woods that "The Woman Haters' Club" has a bright future.

With the coming of "The June Bride" to the Majestic tomorrow we shall have another musical offering from the continent and, curiously enough, one that has music by the composer of "The Woman Haters' Club." The book and lyrics, too, of both pieces, fell from the same pen. This should give a measure of encouragement to the producers of "The June Bride." Another item of interest in "The June Bride" may be found in the fact that it is the first serious musical production by the re-united firm of Weber and Fields.

ADDING Wilson, Melrose to the list of players at the Castle Square Theatre Mr. Craig brings back to Boston one of the most popular leading men in the field of stock. There is but little doubt that Mr. Melrose will strengthen the organization that has done so well for Mr. Craig during the last four years. The multiplied duties that have fallen upon Mr. Craig have compelled him to seek help in the playing end of his business, and with an actor of Mr. Melrose's stamp in the company it will be easy for Mr. Craig to lighten his own work in so far as it concerns acting. The plan at present is to have Mr. Craig and Mr. Melrose divide the labors that fall upon the leading man. This will keep Mr. Craig out of the bill frequently, at which times it may be expected that he will devote himself to the serious business affairs of the Castle Square. Mr. Melrose is sure to find night." Rosenthal was empty of money, but his sharp eye fell upon Ed. Smith of the Shubert Theatre. Rosenthal here found an easy $50, but always thoughtful of his employer's reputation insisted that he would not borrow the money from Smith unless the latter solemnly agreed not to tell Lee Shubert about it. "Oh, lord," exclaimed Rosenthal, "think of how it would upset Broadway if it were known that Woods had borrowed $50 from a Shubert manager." It was decided to keep the affair a deep secret.

THE Hollis Street Theatre, which is passing through an unusual spell of darkness for this season of the year, will return to activity Monday, September 30, with "The Talker," a play that points a strong moral as well as unfolding an attractive entertainment. "The Talker" enjoyed a prosperous run in New York last season and by reason of its unusual theme was responsible for a somewhat widespread discussion among women. With the coming of "The Talker" there will return to this city Miss Florence Malone, who will be remembered as the leading woman of "The Gormmeters" during its long engagement at the Park two seasons ago. Miss Malone is not only an actress of great charm, but she enjoys the special advantage of youth and good looks.

ANOTHER important arrival on September 30 will be "Oliver Twist," which will settle briefly at the Plymouth. This Liebler & Co. revival of "Oliver Twist" has been followed by extraordinary success from every standpoint, and its engagement at the Plymouth should in a measure repeat the good fortune that attended it in New York. The practice of reviving old plays is not a new departure for Liebler & Co., for they began operations in that direction back in 1899, when "The Three Musketeers" was dug out of the barrel and produced with an all-star cast. Other imposing revivals made by the Lieblers were "In a Balcony," "The Hunchback," "The Two Orphans," "She Sings to Conquer" and "London Assurance." In the "Oliver Twist" revival the principal players will include Wilton Lackaye, Marie Doro, Constance Collier and Edmund Breese. It is a curious coincidence that in the first big revival made by this firm thirteen years ago Mrs. Breese was a member of the company.

a joyous welcome when he makes his first appearance under new management.

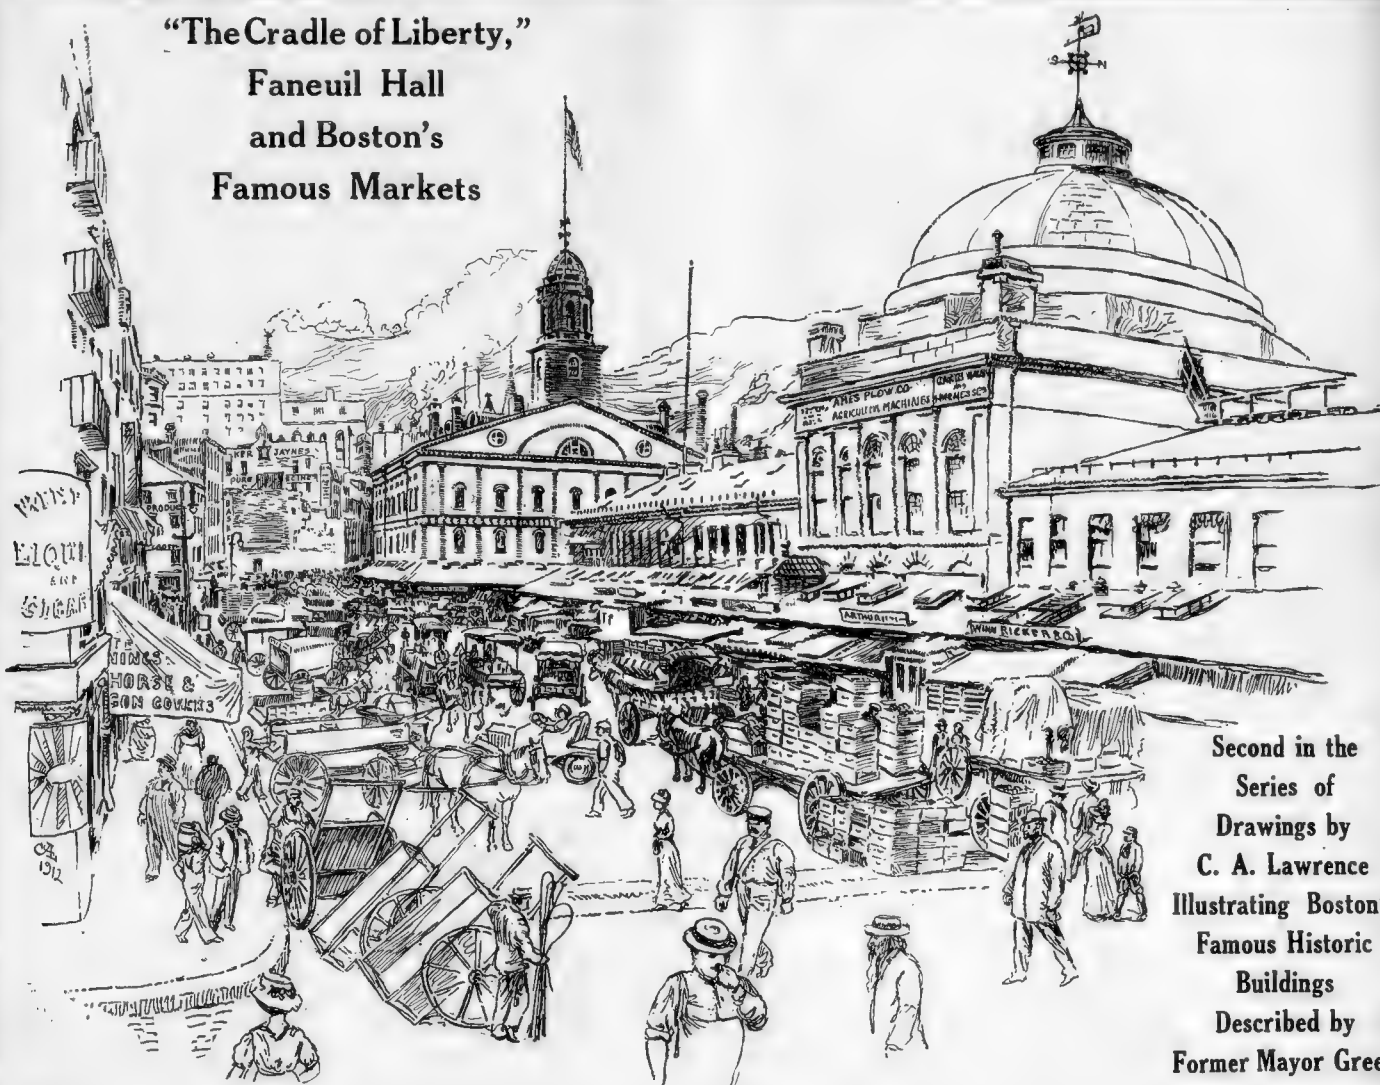

ELABORATE plans are being made for the engagement of "Robin Hood," which is scheduled to arrive at the Boston Theatre in another week. This so-called all-star revival of the Bostonian's old success makes a peculiar appeal to players and music lovers in this city. In the old days there was nothing quite so dear to the local player as the Bostonians and there is every reason to believe that the big production of "Robin Hood" will not only be a revival of the best comic opera ever written in America, but will also revive a smart local interest in the entertainment. The New York engagement of "Robin Hood" was one long succession of crowded houses and there is every reason to believe that a similar condition will exist at the Boston. At any rate no light opera has ever moved upon this city with a better equipped singing organization.

AH. WOODS is sometimes a man of sudden impulses. They are still telling the story in New York of how he decided one morning last June to go to Europe just twenty minutes before the Mauritania sailed. Mr. Woods made the boat safely, but while moving down the bay he discovered that his cash on hand for the trip amounted to exactly $8.76. Fortunately he met A. L. Erlanger on the ship and the financial affairs of the impulsive gentleman was easily adjusted. But Mr. Woods evidently persists in the tendency to start away on long journeys without sufficient funds. He was in town Monday to watch the opening of his "The Woman Haters' Club" at the Tremont and had announced that he would leave for New York on the 1 o'clock train. At 12:15 a. m. just as he was leaving a downtown cafe to go to the South Station he recalled that a purchase of a new suit of clothes had reduced his funds to less than $2. "Say, Jake," said Mr. Woods to J. J. Rosenthal, "let me have $50 until tomorrow

C. A. Lawrence
Illustrating Boston's Famous Historic Buildings
Described by Former Mayor Green

WITH this issue of the Sunday AMERICAN its readers have placed before them the second of a remarkable series of pen and ink drawings of Boston scenes drawn by Charles Arthur Lawrence.

The picture today is of Faneuil Hall, the "Cradle of Liberty," famous all around the globe as the great nursery of our national patriotism.

For their artistic beauty and their historic value these pictures, drawn by Mr. Lawrence, are of inestimable value to all Bostonians, but especially to the boys and girls who are now old enough to be enrolled this Fall in the high schools and academies of New England.

This is only the second. Yet, already is Mr. Pennell, the captious Quaker City artist, well answered in his absurd assertion that Boston made him weary, just bored him, for "there's nothing worth sketching in Boston."

As soon as the great army of Boston and New England men and women, who will admire this picture today, are finished with expressing their admiration of Mr. Lawrence's work, they will be of one mind, viz.:

"There is MUCH that's worth sketching in Boston."

By SAMUEL ABBOTT GREEN.

Former Mayor of Boston and Librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

NO city on this continent has a larger wealth of historical memorials than Boston. Travelers come here from all parts of the country, year by year, to revel in the glories of the nation's past as carefully preserved buildings and even the very pavements of the city continue to tell the story. It is a story that shall long endure, thanks to the loving patriotism of Boston citizens.

Three centuries of American history are now wrapped up in Boston, every line of it thrilling and inspiring in its influence upon succeeding generations.

It is a grand heritage which Boston hands to her sons and daughters as the hour of responsibility arrives. It is good to know that, up to our day, the birthright has been well guarded for the treasure-house of those who are to come.

This newspaper prints today a splendid etching of Faneuil Hall, America's Cradle of Liberty!

What pantheon of Europe can marshal memories of grander inspiration?

Some five years ago, one Patrick Clark was a delegate to a national convention in Faneuil Hall. Mr. Clark had travelled clear across this country from the State of Oregon. He was accompanied by his good wife and seven handsome children, three girls and four boys.

"Going to Europe after the convention with your family, Mr. Clark?" queried a reporter at recess.

"No, sir; it may be Europe next year, I hope. But this year I told the folks I would bring them to Boston and Faneuil Hall."

What Westminster Abbey is to Englishmen, what the Pantheon is to Paris and to France, what St. Sofia is to the city by the Bosphorus, and all much more Faneuil Hall is to Boston and to this republic.

A great orator rose to speak at a convention in Faneuil Hall a few years ago. He was dumb for half a minute as he faced the audience. After the meeting he was reminded of the hesitancy, which had caused much uneasiness to his friends, and he was asked the cause.

"It is a wonder I was able to say anything," was his reply. "My emotions almost overcame me as I remembered where I was. All I could think of for many seconds was the scriptural injunction, 'Take thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place where thou standest is holy.'"

Following his tribute to the Old State House and the beautiful picture of the ancient structure printed on this page of last Sunday's AMERICAN, the Hon. Samuel Abbott Green, ex-Mayor of Boston, contributes the following this week as voicing his impressions of the fine picture of Faneuil Hall which this newspaper publishes today:

This is indeed a fine picture of Faneuil Hall, and how it joins the present and the past! Look at that automobile. How it tells us of progress and of present-day activity. And that grand old building itself. What glorious memories it preserves for our people!

The donor of Faneuil Hall was a young man when he made his gift to the town of Boston. He was about forty, I think. The hall as we see it now is different from the structure of Faneuil's day. It has been raised, and, as you know, in recent years it has been renovated and also made fireproof, without, however, disturbing the fine original lines.

From the beginning it was the people's great meeting place. It is treasured now by the city of Boston, and I hope will be treasured for very many generations to come, as being the great storehouse, so to speak, of Boston's most patriotic memories.

Faneuil Hall began its career in 1765. For ten years before the Revolution came the people were uneasy, restless, discontented with their government from across the seas. And when the Stamp Act came upon them it was to Faneuil Hall they flocked to take counsel as to the duty of the hour. Within those walls many other similar counsels were held until finally popular resentment found its culmination in the historic Tea Party.

Boston of those days was a goodly town. Strange as it may seem to us today, Salem was its great competitor. Salem had greater commerce than Boston, a large part of it with the coast of Africa. But, for one reason and another, Salem's prestige as a port was absorbed by Boston, just as Roxbury, South Boston, Dorchester and Charlestown have been drawn into one great municipality called Boston. Such absorption was inevitable.

Those were stirring days before the Revolution of which Faneuil Hall speaks to us with mute eloquence. There were the Boston Massacre and the Tea Party, although, as you know, the Old South Meeting House also played a great part in those events.

May I close with the hope that Faneuil Hall, the Old South Meeting House and the Old State House be preserved as far as possible into the future, not only as monuments of our Boston's past, but as sign-posts for the guidance of those who are yet to come.
